Senate Votes To Continue D. C. Rent Control Law

Unanimous Action Would Make Mar. 31 New Deadline; U. S. Bill Goes to Truman

The Senate voted unanimously last night to extend the District rent control law until next March 31, shortly after Congress completed action on compromise legislation to continue rent ceilings nationally to the same date.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) of the House District Committee will map plans today for seeking prompt consideration in committee. The local measure—a simple 60-day extender of the present rent law—is almost a certainty to sail through the House.

The Federal rent legislation went to the White House last night after the House gave final voice-vote approval.

Without action by Congress, Federal rent ceilings would expire December 31 in all cities except those which took local action to continue them until next June 30.

The District law, unless continued, would lapse on January 31.

Only a minimum of floor discussion followed Neely's statement that the bill provides only an extension and not a change in the basic law.

Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.), who always speaks against rent control, rose to make the record clear he hasn't wavered from his past stand.

Neely had no trouble amending the local law on the floor to conform with the termination date of the Federal law. When the bill was introduced last week it called for controls only until February 28.

The House voted for the March cutoff date, and conferees agreed. The President also wanted the 90-day version to give the incoming Eighty-second Congress more time to study the rent picture in light of the stepped-up rearmament and mobilization programs and their impact on housing.

The Federal legislation contains a special clause affecting the situation in Los Angeles where the rent decontrol situation is tied up in court action. The Senate-inserted provision states local rent decontrol resolutions shall be valid even though they do not completely comply with local legislative procedure. The provision applies to resolutions already adpoted as well as resolutions that may be adopted.

'Tis Only the Wind, Jailer Says of Escapees' Clatter

MANASSAS, Va., Dec. 11 (Special).—Two prisoners escaped the Prince William County jail here this morning.

They used the iron bars of their prison cot to pry open the bars of the cell door.

They chiseled through the locks of two other doors.

They took five pints of confiscated whisky from the jail office.

Jailer Joe Gardner, who lives in the jail, said he was awakened several times during the night by noises.

But, he added, he thought—at the time—it was nothing more than the sound of the wind and the fall of snow from the roof.

Prisoners Charles Hughes, 18, and Emerson Sawell, 21, both of Manassas and both awaiting trial on larceny charges, were still at large last night.

Czar Turned Down On Contract Renewal

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 11.—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler today was voted out of office by club owners of the two major leagues and will retire at the end of his present term, May 1, 1952.

The sudden action of the club owners was taken in secret balloting held during the day.

A representative of each league, Co-owner Del Webb of the New York Yankees, and Owner Phil Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs, advised Chandler of their action shortly after the dinner hour.

Webb and Wrigley announced that three ballots were taken during the day on a motion to renew Chandler's seven-year contract that now calls for $65,000 a year.

On the first ballot, Chandler was supported by nine votes, with seven in opposition. On the second ballot, the voting was 8-8. On the third ballot, it was again 9-7 in favor of Chandler.

Under the major league rules, a three fourths majority, or 12 votes, is necessary to reelect the commissioner.

In their stunning reversal of what had been expected to be a Chandler reelection by a landslide, the club owners barely beat the deadline on the required 18-month notice to an outgoing commissioner.

Chandler summoned a special press conference to make the announcement. Somber, and with traces of shock still apparent in his face, he made the news known.

Asked if he would serve out the rest of his term, Chandler said, "It

Mickey Cohen Chief Counsel Shot to Death

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11 (AP).—Sam Rummel, 52, long-time top man of gambler Mickey Cohen's legal staff, was killed from ambush today by a patient assassin.

The pattern, police pointed out, was similar to an ambush outside a restaurant 18 months ago, when Cohen and three others were wounded. A bodyguard, Neddie Herbert, later died. As today, the gunman apparently hid for hours waiting for his quarry.

Police Chief William H. Parker disclosed reports that Rummel was involved in gambling enterprises on his own are being investigated.

"We have reports that he was interested in a Gardena poker club, and had other interests," the chief said. Gardena, a Los Angeles suburb, has draw poker clubs that are legal under California law.

Parker added that investigators are considering the possibility that Cohen and Rummel may have split, because Cohen had another attorney two weeks ago in an appearance before a United States Senate crime investigating hearing.

Cohen was questioned for more than four hours at the Rummel home, where a gunman cut down the attorney with a shotgun blast in the neck as he stepped outside his brilliantly floodlit garage.

Cohen refused to say anything to reporters as he left with his wife, Lavon. He appeared jittery. He and his wife got into separate Cadillacs and drove away.

Cohen went to the house after the shooting, and Parker revealed that Rummel's wife had asked that he be ejected, complaining of the notoriety. But, the chief said, "We're keeping him here because it's more convenient to pursue the inquiry right here."

Police found indications that the executioner may have waited for hours, pressed against a steel mesh fence that separates Rummel's

Thomas Admits Adherence to Red Policies

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Henry Thomas, president of the AFL Building Laborers' Local 74, admitted yesterday he'd been "instinctively" following the Communist Party line for more than two years after officially quitting the party and signing a non-Communist affidavit.

Thomas, testifying before the House Un-American Activities Committee, said that he has now made a clean break with the line as well as with the party—ever since a week ago Thursday, when the committee subpenaed him as a witness.

The World War II veteran, who, with a half dozen fellow Communists, captured control of a 3000-member union here, said he already had been wavering in his mind about the sincerity of the Communist Party, even before the subpena arrived. That was because he discovered that there were really two Communist parties: the one he thought he'd joined, "working for humanity"; and the other, which he "couldn't stand," interested in sabotage and espionage against the American Government.

Upon receiving the subpena,

New Zealand's Former Premier Peter Fraser Dies

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (Tuesday), Dec. 12 (AP).—Former Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand died today.

The 66-year-old Fraser, who headed his country's Labor government from 1940 to 1949, died at 2:47 p. m. (9:47 p. m. Monday, EST).

Since his party was defeated in a general election a year ago by the Free Enterprise Nationalists, Fraser had been leader of the Labor opposition.

AP Men Injured

4 Killed in Singapore Rioting Set Off by Custody Decision

SINGAPORE (Tuesday), Dec. 12 (AP).—Widespread rioting swept Singapore all day yesterday, leaving at least four dead and more than 140 persons injured. The continuing riots grew out of Moslem wrath at a court decision returning a Moslem-reared girl to her Dutch mother, a Roman Catholic.

The rioting eased early today.

Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent, was admitted to a hospital this morning after being missing for several hours. He was conscious, but the extent of his injuries was not immediately determined.

Allen fled from a pursuing mob late yesterday and managed to find safe haven in a Chinese house in the riot area through the night. His companion, Associated Press Chief of Bureau Tom Masterson, suffered a broken leg and bodily injuries. The car in which they were riding was burned. An AP photographer, George Seow, earlier was dragged from a truck and his camera smashed.

The 13-year-old girl whose case touched off disturbances is Maria Bertha Hertogh. The court, in turning the girl over to her mother last week, annulled her marriage to a Moslem schoolteacher. British authorities last night spirited her from a convent to a hiding place, heavily guarded. The Mohammedan rioters had threatened to storm the convent in an effort to obtain the girl and return her to the husband or a Malayan foster mother who reared her for eight years.

All Europeans were warned to stay indoors through the night. British and colonial troops bolstered police in their attempt to quell the rioting.

Roadblocks were set up to prevent Moslems from marching on

Court Backs 'No Answer' On Red Link

8-0 Supreme Bench Ruling Due to Put Crimp in Probes By 'Hill' Committees

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A unanimous Supreme Court yesterday ruled that the Constitution gives a witness "the privilege of remaining silent" when questioned about the Communist Party or connections with it.

The 8-to-0 ruling probably will put a considerable crimp in the activities of congressional committees concerned with communism. Many recent witnesses have refused to testify on grounds of self-incrimination.

The recent indictment for contempt of Congress of Earl Browder, Frederick Vanderbilt Field and Philip Jaffe is cast in doubt by the ruling.

Decision by Black

The decision was delivered by Justice Hugo L. Black and concurred in by all his associates except Justice Tom C. Clark, who did not participate in the case. Clark was Attorney General when the case was brought.

The case directly involved Patricia Blau of Denver, Colo., who had been sentenced to a year in jail for refusing to answer questions before a Federal grand jury in 1948. She was asked several questions concerning the Communist Party of Colorado and her employment in it. Black said. The Court of Appeals affirmed the conviction.

But, said Black, the Supreme Court took the case because the decision "appeared to deny rights guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment" to the Constitution, which declares that "no person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself . . ."

Black noted that when Mrs. Blau was called before the grand jury the Smith Act was on the statute books, making it a crime to advocate the overthrow of the Government by force or violence or to become a member of such a group with knowledge of its purposes. The Smith Act itself has been challenged before the Supreme Court by the convicted 11 top Communist leaders and the high court is now considering their case.

"Reasonable" Fear Cited

Black said that Mrs. Blau "reasonably could fear that criminal charges might be brought against her if she admitted employment by the Communist Party or intimate knowledge of its workings. Whether such admissions by themselves would support a conviction under a criminal statute is immaterial.

"Answers to the questions asked by the grand jury would have furnished a link in the chain of evidence needed in a prosecution of petitioner for violation of (or conspiracy to violate) the Smith Act. Prior decisions of this court have clearly established that, under such circumstances, the Constitution gives a witness the privilege of remaining silent.

"The attempt by the courts below to compel petitioner to testify runs counter to the Fifth Amend-

War Footing for Industry, Selective Controls Planned; MacArthur Says Reds 'Failed'

Chinese Planned Quick Destruction Of U. N., He Says; Cautiously Optimistic

TOKYO, Dec. 11 (AP).—General MacArthur cautiously suggested tonight that his United Nations troops could hold off heavy Chinese forces in Korea for the time being, but he warned, in effect, they could not do it for long.

MacArthur gave his appraisal after a day-long air trip to both Korean fronts.

His views, read to newsmen, boiled down to these points:

1. The Chinese failed in their plan secretly to build up enough strength to destroy U.N. forces with "one massive stroke," because their hand was tipped prematurely by the November 24 Allied offensive.

2. Allied forces, hit by the Chinese hordes, withdrew with skill and heroism.

3. The fighting retreat has cost the Chinese "staggering" losses—perhaps ten to one.

4. Now, "I consider that the command for the time being is relatively secure," despite the "enormous danger" of fresh attacks by the vast Chinese armies.

This was a notably conservative estimate for the General whose anticipation of future victories often has sounded optimistic during momentary crises.

MacArthur seemed to be saying more cautiously the same thing that has come repeatedly from the fighting front—that either the Chinese must be halted politically or the Allies strengthened if Korea it to be held for any length of time.

He had just returned from flying visits to the Eighth Army command at Kimpo Airfield near Seoul and the Tenth Corps command near Hamhung.

Mediation Commission Urged

13 Nations Ask U. N. to Appeal To Red China for Korea Truce

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 11 (AP).—Thirteen Arab-Asian countries called on the United Nations tonight to appeal to Red China for a cease-fire in Korea. They also urged immediate steps for mediation by a U. N. commission.

All 13 countries who joined last week in a plea to the Chinese Communists to halt their armes at the thirty-eighth parallel approved the cease-fire request. The mediation commission was adopted by a 12-0 vote in the absence of a Philippines representative.

Sir Benegal N. Rau said the text of the two approved resolutions will be introduced in the General Assembly political committee here Tuesday morning.

Meanwhile, a United States source said that that American position is unchanged. He said the United States will not accept any cease-fire plan that carries the hint of a political deal. If it is a cease-fire only on military terms, the United States will consider it, this source said.

Debate went on in the Assembly political committee over a six-power proposal to ask Red China to remove all its troops from North Korea.

Britain, the United States, France, Norway, Ecuador and Cuba were sponsors. Russia vetoed a similar request in the Security Council two weeks ago.

The Soviet viewpoint was advanced again today by Poland's Stefan Wierblowski, who reiterated the arguments that the Chinese Communists fighting in Ko-

Emergency Decree Forecast Wednesday; Truman to Address Nation in Broadcast

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The White House is moving rapidly to a decision, expected to be announced this week, to bring the American munitions industry as rapidly as possible to a virtual war footing.

A presidential declaration of a national emergency, possibly as soon as Wednesday, will serve as a prelude—and a psychological exclamation mark—to the enormous speed-up and build-up of economic mobilization.

The new program is believed to contain these elements:

1. The announcement — either concurrently with the declaration of a national emergency or shortly thereafter in a presidential radio broadcast—of a program for munitions production as large and intensive in the coming 12 months as in the year after Pearl Harbor.

2. A consequent tremendous increase in military budget requests and spending.

3. A substantial increase in the present 2.8-million-man goal for the armed services, and an attainment of that goal much sooner than had been thought of.

4. Imposition within a few days of the first selective price control—a mandatory suspension of the recently announced auto price increases—to be followed in short order by other selective price and wage ceilings, and general overall price-wage controls just as soon as an adequate administrative staff is assembled.

5. A rapid intensification of the cutback and limitation orders that reduce the amounts of scarce materials going into articles for consumers, that forbid the very production of some goods, and greatly limit the numbers of others that can be turned out.

The most important aspect of all this from a defense point of view is the expanded and redefined military production program. Most of the other steps derive, as necessary consequences, from it. The declaration of a state of national emergency will be made, it is understood, principally to underline it, and give it a momentous impact on public opinion.

In part this will be because of

Acheson Plans Brussels Trip, Defense Talks

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson is expected to fly to Brussels this weekend for a combined meeting of the foreign ministers and defense ministers of the 12 North Atlantic Treaty countries.

The chief purpose of the meeting will be to reach speedy and final agreement on an integrated Western defense force, under an international staff and a supreme commander.

The Europeans still hope that the appointment of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as commander can by announced by December 19, when the two-day conference is due to end.

Technicalities here may delay the formal appointment until later in the month, but Eisenhower has already agreed informally that his headquarters should be somewhere in western France.

Defense Secretary Marshall will be unable to go to Brussels for this meeting, and probably will

Virginia Triples Draft Physical Examination Call

Virginia's selective service headquarters has almost tripled the December physical examination call in the light of international developments, the Associated Press reported from Richmond yesterday.

State Director Asher W. Harman said: "We have a small backlog of men physically qualified for the draft but we don't want to get caught short." A total of 3058 men was added to the 1536 which were to take exams to fill a January draft call of 872.

Maryland and District officials reported they had not planned to increase the December call. One District official, however, that the call "may be stepped up in January."

House Group Defers Raid Alarm Action

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A House appropriations subcommittee voted late yesterday to defer consideration of requested funds to give Washington a city-wide air-raid warning system and other protection against enemy attack.

The surprise action came shortly after Commissioner Guy Mason and other top District officials made a strong case for approval of a $337,500 civil defense item at a closed-door hearing before the House subcommittee which handles District appropriations.

Specifically, the subcommittee voted 4 to 1 to "defer" acting on the money request until the new Congress convenes in January.

Chairman Joe E. Bates (D., Ky.), refused to disclose the subcommittee action, but one member said:

"One of the big reasons we voted against giving the Distrct money now was to give the House greater bargaining power over the Senate.

The member explained that the subcommittee felt certain the Senate would agree to granting a substantial portion of the District request. Therefore, when the item goes to conference, the House will be in a stronger bargaining position by being on record against any civil defense funds.

Subcommittee arguments against voting the preparedness fund now include these, it was learned:

1. The pattern for civil defense nationally has not been set, and consequently District civil defense expenditures should be delayed to make certain they conform with Federal plans for other cities.

2. Congress may decide to grant all civil defense appropriations under one national bill, which would include the District.

3. Most of the $100,000 Congress appropriated last September for civil defense is almost intact, although almost the entire sum is

Navy Is Ordering 48 Minesweepers For 'Urgent' Need

The Navy announced yesterday that because of an "urgent military requirement" for minesweepers, it will begin negotiations immediately with 16 private shipbuilders for 48 of these vessels.

Negotiations will also begin with four companies selected to build 113 amphibious vehicles. In addition, competitive bids have been invited—or will be invited soon—for the construction of 203 lighters and barges for the Army and Navy.

The "urgent military requirement" mentioned in the Navy announcement is pointed out by the serious trouble the Navy has encountered with Communist mines in Korean waters.

To date two Navy minesweepers have been sunk and two destroyers and another minesweeper damaged after hitting mines.

The new minesweepers will be of wooden construction, 29 for the United States and 19 for countries in the mutual defense assistance program.

As for the amphibious vehicles, the Navy said there is an equally urgent requirement. The 113 vehicles will include armored vehicles—LVT (A)—and 43 personnel carrying vehicles—LVT.

$22,065 Pledged as Special Chest Campaign Ends 2d Day

(Related story on Page B-8)

The Community Chest, in the second day of its all-out "emergency drive" for $887,000, reported yesterday it has collected $22,065 since the report meeting last Friday.

The $22,065 represents all Chest sources—pledges by mail and by the Chest's MEtropolitan 6262, telephone campaign.

By calling MEtropolitan 6262, Washington area residents who have been missed by Chest solicitors or who want to increase their pledges can conveniently aid the Red Feather's activities in 1951.

Radio, television and newspapers have been aiding the Chest in its intensive campaign.

Chest officials announced yesterday that they have supplemented their appeals with letters to Washington business leaders and special Red Feather solicitors.

The Government Unit at a luncheon in the Washington Hotel yesterday reported contributions totaling $1,500,070—88.65 percent of its $1,692,200 goal.

The State Department reported 110 percent of its goal, with some divisions reporting 125 percent and above.

The Chest goal for the Washington area this year is $4,260,000.

So far, a little more than 79 percent has been collected.

The MEtropolitan 6262 campaign was specifically designed to meet the Chest's Korea-aggravated needs.

Chiang Maneuver Fails

Senate Votes $38,000,000 Aid To Drought-Hit Yugoslavia

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday overwhelmingly approved 38 million dollars in new Marshall Plan money for Marshal Tito's drought-impoverished Yugoslavia in this session's first major foreign policy showdown.

The vote was 60 to 21. Senate passage followed failure of a GOP maneuver to make aid to Tito conditional on a similar grant to Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese Nationalists.

A move to recommit the Yugoslav bill to make it subject to amendments aiding Chiang was defeated 42 to 38.

The motion was phrased in such a way that it was not a clear-cut test of Nationalist China sentiment, however. Leaders said a direct aid-to-Chiang rider would have polled fewer votes.

The Tito aid measure, designed to help insure Yugoslavian independence of Russia, now goes to the House, which will vote today on a companion 38-million-dollar food grant to Tito.

There was this difference between the House and Senate aid bills, however. A Senate amendment makes it possible to bypass the appropriating committees by transferring the amount from existing ECA funds. Thus the 38 million dollars would be immediately available. The House bill "authorizes" the same sum, but it would have to be appropriated later.

Actually the Senate amendment, offered by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) would transfer 50 million dollars from ECA to the Yugoslav fund, but 12 million dollars of this amount alnational security, and in part because the goals themselves may not appear to be as large as they really are. For example, the airpline production figure will not be as large as the famous "100,000 planes a year" of President Roosevelt's day, yet the new total will represent, in dollars and manhours of work and tactical importance, as great an effort as in World War II.

From one source it was indicated that President Truman intended the announcement of a whole series of powerful defense steps to follow each other in bumper-to-bumper succession throughout this week. The intent is twofold: To impress the Nation with the desperate need for action vastly more extensive than that taken to date, and to get that action going at once.

The objective is defense production virtually at the same scale and amount and speed that it would be if the Nation were engaged in a declared world war.

President Plans Broadcast

It was learned at the White House yesterday morning that a declaration of a national emergency was likely this week.

Thereupon reporters were informed that President Truman had invited 19 top congressional figures to meet with him Wednesday morning "to discuss matters concerning the proclaiming of a national emergency and related matters."

The group includes the Vice President, the Speaker, the majority and minority leaders of the Senate and House, and Senator Taft (R., Ohio), in his capacity of chairman of the Republican Policy Committee. Also invited are the chairman and ranking Republicans of the House and Senate Appropriations, Armed Services and Foreign Policy Committees.

Later, the White House confirmed reports that the President had in mind making a Nation-wide radio broadcast in a few days.

It is possible this will come Wednesday or Thursday.

During the afternoon, Mr. Truman had two set meetings, one with the National Security Council, and the other with the top economic mobilization figures in the Government, including his Council of Economic Advisers; Alan Valentine, director of the Economic Stabilization Agency; Cyrus Ching, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board; Michael V. DiSalle, the price administrator; W. Stuart Symington, top economic mobilizer; and W. Averell Harriman, special presidential assistant on foreign policy.

To Galvanize Public Opinion

The concrete effect of the issuance of the national emergency declaration will be slight, it was indicated yesterday. Two such declarations, one of 1939 and the other of 1942, are still in effect and so also are the powers that they contained. A new order will serve some legal purpose of clarification and "neating up" of the picture, and may also permit less cumbersome contracting for Government and defense procurement.

But the main purpose is psychological, to try to shock the Nation out of a business-as-usual attitude. The new economic mobilization goal is the matter of real importance, but is difficult to proclaim in a way that galvanizes public opinion. By announcing the declaration and the new program more or less concurrently, the Administration hopes to give appearance to substance, and substance to appearance.

Civilians' Rubber Use Again Reduced by NPA

The National Production Authority yesterday again cut down the amount of natural rubber that may be consumed in civilian uses. It limited manufacturers to 40,000 tons in January and 35,000 tons in February, an average cut 28 percent below the already reduced November quota.

The NPA allowed, however, the same over-all quota of rubber—natural and synthetic—for the first two months next year as at present, and ordered producers to continue the maximum production of "camelback" for the recapping of tires. Camelback uses only 5 percent of natural rubber, the rest synthetic and reclaimed.

Senate Votes Tito $38,000,000

ready has gone to Tito in emergency food shipments.

Other stop gap allotments from the Export-Import Bank and the Mutual Defense Assistance program bring the aid already extended Yugoslavia to $31,400,000. The bill passed yesterday would raise this total to $69,400,000.

Additional Senate amendments (1) put Tito on notice that the United States is not indorsing suppression of religious, political and economic freedom in Yugoslavia, and (2) required a report within three months on how Yugoslavia is living up to requirements fixed in the bill.

Both amendments were offered by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) and accepted by Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.).

Connally made a point of order, however, against the aid-to-Chiang amendment offered by Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.). The chair ruled it was not "germane" to the bill.

Knowland promptly reoffered the amendment in the form of a motion to recommit the bill. Knowland's original recommit motion would have instructed the Foreign Relations Committee to report the bill back to the Senate with aid to the Chinese Nationalists added to it.

Recommittal Fails

At the suggestion of Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), Knowland modified his motion to omit any direct reference to China. It provided, instead, for simple recommittal of the bill, with instructions to the committee to report back to the Senate "forthwith."

Had the motion been adopted, the parliamentary effect would have been to clear the track for a direct Senate vote on Knowland's 38-million-dollar grant to Chiang from funds already appropriated for the "general area" of China.

Knowland told the Senate it was just as important to help Chiang as it was to aid Tito. He charged the Administration had consigned to the "deep freeze" 75 million dollars previously appropriated for the general area of China. He recalled that Yugoslavia had shot down American planes but said Chiang had worked with us as an ally.

Connally retorted that the Chinese Nationalists had never lost a battle for lack of equipment and said the United States had aided Chiang to the tune of some two billion dollars.

He said Knowland's proposal would "penalize Yugoslavia in order to make a gesture to Nationalist China."

"What do you want—an all out war with Red China?" the Texan shouted.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) sided with Knowland. Taft said he saw no conflict between Yugoslav and Nationalist China aid. He said the purpose of both proposals was to bolster military "diversions" against Russia.

Thirty-four Republicans and four Democrats voted for recommittal. But five Republicans jumped the party line to vote with 37 Democrats against Knowland's amendment. They are Senators Aiken and Flanders of Vermont, Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, Tobey of New Hampshire, and Wiley of Wisconsin.

On the passage vote, however, 25 Republicans voted with 35 Democrats to aid Yugoslavia. Only seven Democrats and 14 Republicans voted "No."

By flying to Europe at this time, in spite of the Far Eastern crisis, Acheson would dramatize America's redoubled interest in a speed-up of western European defense.

President Truman and Acheson were emphatic in telling Prime Minister Attlee of Britain last week that the United States would not let its troubles in Asia take its primary attention away from Europe.

The Brussels meeting would give Acheson a chance to make the same point to the representatives of other European governments, all of which have been terrified at the thought of the United States getting bogged down in a major war in the Pacific.

President Truman also reminded Attlee last week that Congress might balk at further large-scale help to Europe unless it had clear evidence that the Europeans were doing their utmost to rearm. Again, the Brussels meeting would enable Acheson to underline what the President said.

A visit to Brussels at this time would bring Acheson together for the first time since September with his Big Three colleagues, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France. At past meetings of the North Atlantic Council, these three have had informal talks among themselves, and probably would do so again, although nothing like a full-fledged Big Three meeting is planned.

The North Atlantic military committee, with Admiral Forrest P. Sherman representing the United States, is now putting the finishing touches on a compromise plan for using German units in an integrated Western army.

Even with this long-deadlocked question out of the way, the Defense Ministers will have unfinished business of their own when they meet in Brussels next Monday. At their last Washington meeting in October they did not reach final agreement on the form of the integrated army, the structure of the headquarters and the powers of the supreme commander.

It is taken for granted that Eisenhower will have to ask the consent of each government before ordering its troops onto another country's soil. Nevertheless, he will have training powers and others greater than those he had as supreme commander in wartime.

Assuming that Acheson goes to Brussels, he will not visit London, Paris or other capitals at this time. The "pressure of events" is so great that yesterday, for the second time in six days, he canceled a proposed address on foreign policy—this one to the Farmers Union Grain Terminal Association at St. Paul.

Present plans call for his taking only two days for the Brussels meeting and then hurrying home to deal with the Far East and other insistent problems.

350 Are at Work In 36 Countries On Point 4 Tasks

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 11 (AP).—Dr. Henry G. Bennett, new director of the "Point Four" program, said today 350 American technicians already are at work in 36 foreign countries to start the task of bettering living conditions in underdeveloped areas.

Doctor Bennett, former president of Oklahoma A. and M. University, said the 350 technicians were "winning battles for American democracy" by helping improve health, sanitation, education and transportation in friendly nations.

In a speech prepared for the Oklahoma State Bankers Association, Doctor Bennett said in explaining his new assignment:

"It is an opportunity to sow the seeds of democracy among the people who no longer accept poverty, disease and sickness as the inevitable facts of life.

Answering attacks on the Point Four program as a "welfare" plan, Doctor Bennett said: "the people who automatically tremble or boil at the idea of welfare had better face the facts of life in 1950. They belong to the dead past."

Lift Bar to Mainland Attack, Chiang Urges

Unity Stressed

Oust-Acheson Move by GOP Fades Away

The oust-Acheson movement made no further progress yesterday among Republican Senators.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), author of a resolution of "no confidence" in the Secretary of State, reported that he and the other members of a GOP policy subcommittee considered the proposal without reaching any conclusions at all.

"At this time it is utterly impossible to forecast what the outcome of the deliberations will be," he said after a meeting with Senators Millikin (Colo.), Wherry (Nebr.), and H. Alexander Smith (New Jersey). Millikin is chairman of the conference of all 43 Republican Senators. Wherry is the GOP floor leader. All four Senators are members of the Republican Policy Committee to which Ives submitted his proposal to demand the immediate replacement of Acheson.

There were indications the resolution may be completed revamped before it is submitted to the full conference for action, with any direct mention of Acheson eliminated. Instead, the Republicans may decide to set out a list of what international policies they feel they can support, and another list of those they cannot.

Although many of the Republican lawmakers hold that Acheson should step aside now, there appeared to be some sentiment to close ranks in the face of the international crisis and try to cooperate as much as possible with the President and his Cabinet aides.

Acheson himself made a special trip to Capitol Hill Saturday to give the lawmakers a review of the conferences between President Truman and British Prime Minister Attlee last week. Today the President asked leading Republican and Democratic members of Congress to confer with him Wednesday on the advisability of declaring a national emergency.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek urged the United States yesterday to lift its "neutralizing" naval blockade of Formosa and permit his Nationalist forces to attack the mainland of Communist China.

In a radioed interview with the independent weekly magazine U. S. News & World Report, he said the anti-Communist cause in Asia can be salvaged, despite the disaster in Korea, if the United States will adopt a "positive and strong policy."

He urged American military aid and leadership to forge all free Asiatic peoples "into one fighting unit," and said it could be equipped for a successful war against communism at one-fifth the cost of rearming western Europe.

Now that Communist China has become the declared enemy of the United Nations, Chiang said, in the copyrighted interview, the United States should lift its bna on Nationalist "military operations against the mainland."

No Plan for U. S. Troops

"While our naval and air forces need urgent aid and further strengthening," he said, "we have never envisaged in our plans for the restoration of freedom to the Chinese mainland the use of American ground forces."

Chiang claimed that more than 1,500,000 guerilla troops are still loyal to his command on the mainland. He emphasized that the size of the army he could put into the field against the Communists "cannot be judged by the size of the force now under my command" on Formosa.

"Civilians and guerillas on the mainland would invariably welcome the return of free China troops to deliver them from Communist oppression," he said. "American aid, instead of causing resentment, will be appreciated."

Chiang also said that:

Japan should be included in his proposed "fighting union" of anti-Communist forces in Asia—an implied indorsement of Japanese rearmament.

Would Do the Bombing

Even conventional bombing of Chinese bases in Manchuria would be used by the Communists "for anti-American propaganda." But the Chinese people will recognize that air raids are a "military necessity" and "any possible unfavorable psychological effect" may be avoided by letting his Nationalist air force do the job.

Asked what effect a U. N. withdrawal from Korea would have on the future or Asia, Chiang said:

"The future of Asia depends basically on the firmness of American Far Eastern policy rather than on any temporary or local fortunes of war.

"Should the Communists succeed in consolidating their control of Asia, the vast human potential of a billion Asians may outweigh the military advantages elsewhere.

"I firmly believe that, through timely American leadership of a fighting union of Asiatic countries, this huge pool of manpower may yet be saved from Communist domination and thereby the world may yet be spared a third world war."

Canada to Form 2 More Battalions For U. N. Service

OTTAWA, Dec. 11 (U.P.)—Defense Minister Brooke Claxton announced today that two more battalions would be added to Canada's Special Service Brigade, created for service under the United Nations or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Formation of the two battalions will bring to seven the number in the brigade. One battalion has left for the Korean war theater and is expected to arrive at its unrevealed "destination" Wednesday.

Claxton said the new battalions would be send down to the Canadian staging center at Forth Lewis, Wash.

Bonn Reported Rejecting German Troops Proposal

BONN (Tuesday), Dec. 12 (AP).—An informed source said today that the West German government will reject plans of the North Atlantic Pact nations to use German combat teams in a Western defense force.

This source said Chancellor Konrad Adenauer disclosed his government's position at a special meeting of parliamentary party leaders here last night.

Adenauer was quoted as saying the plan did not meet German requirements for absolute equality. The Bonn government objected on the grounds that German troops would have inferior status, would be less well armed than divisions of other nations and German officers would not share in the higher command of the joint force.

Press for Gibraltar, Franco Tells Spain

MADRID, Dec. 11 (U.P.)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco called on the Spanish people today to press this country's claim to British Gibraltar.

Franco said in an interview in the newspaper Arriba that Gibraltar had no actual value to Spain because it is outdated, but that "it is a ripe fruit which will some day fall by itself." He said that in a reborn Spain, it was natural that the people should hold demonstrations for the restoration of Gibraltar.

Gunmen Get $60,000 Furs

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Two gunmen held up a fur shop in Central Square today and escaped with pelts valued at $60,000 after locking five employes in a storage vault.

Pravda Says U. S. and Britain Follow War II Aggressor Path

MOSCOW, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—The Soviets said today that the Anglo-American decision to step up rearmament was similar to the action taken by aggressor states before World War II.

The newspaper Pravda said in the first Russian reaction to the meeting of President Truman and British Prime Minister Clement Attlee in Washington last week that if Britain and the United States really wanted peace they would get out of Korea.

Pravda said in a front-page editorial that the Truman-Attlee communique issued after their conference indicated the two nations do not intend to terminate the "aggression they started in Korea."

The newspaper said the two nations will step up preparations for a new war and that Mr. Truman "pressured Attlee into changing the British policy in regard to China and into repudiating the Cairo agreement and Potsdam decisions regarding Taiwan (Formosa)."

This, Pravda said, was "extremely reminiscent of what was done by the governments of aggressive states preparing for the second World War."

Americans, Pravda charged, will continue doing what Mr. Truman, Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and special presidential adviser W. Averell Harriman already are doing—fan war hysteria in the United States, Britain and everywhere American monopolies are seeking increased profits.

Diplomatic observers in Moscow did not appear optimistic over the likelihood of a speedy, negotiated peace settlement in Korea. They said there was nothing to indicate a change from the original position of both sides.

Rhee Denounces Idea of Truce

SEOUL, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—President Syngman Rhee said today that any truce or compromise with the Chinese Communists would not be acceptbale to the Korean government, even if they halted their southward advance at the 38th parallel.

Rhee told a press conference he had instructed Ambassador Chang Myun in Washington to tell the United Nations that "after heavy sacrifices of men and material to check Communist aggression and to unify the country it would be unthinkable to accept any such proposal."

Rhee said he thought the future course of the U. N. forces here rested on the decisions made at Lake Success and that "the sooner the questions are decided the better it will be for us (Koreans) and for all."

Rhee said Gen. Douglas MacArthur had not been given full instructions from the U. N. in the "new war" against the Chinese Communists.

Chevy Chase Man Helps Save Sailor

Ensign Benjamin Hugh Pester, son of Benjamin Harrison Pester of 8207 Larry pl., Chevy Chase, Md., was one of three destroyer men to dive into ice-cold waters off northeast Korea Sunday to rescue another American sailor.

Pester

The rescue operation began when Comdr. J. B. Gay of Coronado, Calif., dove from his destroyer, the Sticknell, without waiting to don a life preserver to aid a crewman from the U.S.S. Philippines Sea. Gay held the unconscious sailor's head above water for 20 minutes while the Sticknell maneuvered alongside.

Pester and Seaman Harvey C. Norman of Ardmore, Okla., then went over the side and helped the two aboard.

Pester, a native of Casper, Wyo., graduated from Wilson High School in 1944 and the United States Naval Academy in 1948. He and his wife, the former Miss Arden Eichelberger of Hagerstown, Md., have one child, Penny Ann, who will be a year old January 29. Mrs. Pester is now in Ocean Beach, Calif.

AREA CASUALTY LIST

Wounded in action—Marine Pfc. Thomas P. Moore, of 1361 Fairmont st. nw.; Army Pfc. Charles P. Blanchard, jr., of Route 1, Lorton, Va.; Marine Pfc. Richard T. Oksanen, of 4500 N. 1th st., Arlington, Va.; Army Sergt. 1/c. Harry D. Leadman of Route 1, Box 350 A., Laurel, Md.

Injured—Marine Sergt. William T. Jasper of 5604 Grant st. ne.

Two area men with the First Marine Division suffered leg wounds in Korean action and two Army area men were also wounded, the Department of Defense announced yesterday.

They were among 300 new casualties listed on national casualty list No. 173. The department named 28 killed, 244 wounded, 17 injured in accidents and 11 missing.

Pfc. Thomas P. Moore, 18, son of Mrs. Alice McCall of 1361 Fairmont st. nw., was hit in the leg on November 29. He is now in Sukuowa Hospital, Japan.

A Marine enlistee at 17, Moore attended St. Charles Elementary School in Clarendon and Falls Church High School.

In his last letter to his mother, Pfc. Moore said he had lost 35 pounds since he arrived in Korea in July.

An Arlington marine, Pfc. Richard T. OKsanen, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Oksanen, of 4500 N. 17th st., was wounded in the leg on November 28.

Overseas since August, Oksanen joined the Marine Reserve at 17, and enlisted in the regular Marines in August, 1948.

Born in the District, he attended Claude Swanson Junior High School and Washington Lee High School in Arlington.

A brother, Robert J. Oksanen, a World War II veteran, is now on active duty with the Navy. A sister, Mrs Jean Parker, was a Marine sergeant in the women's corps during the last war.

Pfc. Charles P. Blanchard, jr., 20, son of Mrs. Bessie G. Blanchard, Route 1, Lorton, Va., received slight wounds November 27. Details of how the private was hurt had not yet been received by his mother. The Occoquan District High student, enlisted in the Army in August, 1948, and was sent to Fort Belvoir. He was with the Thrity-fifth Infantry and left for Korea in June.

Another brother, Carlton E. Blanchard, with the Fifty-eighth Engineer Battalion, has been in Korea since September.

According to word relayed from relatives of Sergt. William T. Jasper, 23, of 5604 Grant st., to his father, the Army man suffered a broken leg on November 19. In telephone calls on November 30, and December 1, to his kin, he asked them to give a message to his father, John R. Jasper.

A veteran of five years in the Army, Jasper was with the 159th Field Artillery as a radar and radio technician. He has been overseas in Japan since 1946, and reenlisted over there in 1948.

Jasper's brother, Melvin Jasper, 21, is now on his way to Korea.

Marine Corps Pfc. Cecil C. Finn, formerly of 2 8th st. ne., was wounded for a second time on Noveember 29. He also suffered wounds on September 16. His wife now lives in Oklahoma.

A member of the Fifth Infantry Battalion, Finn left Washington on August 1, 1950.

A Laurel, Md., soldier, Sergt. Harry D. Leadmon, son of Mrs. Ida M. Leadmon, Route 1, Box 350A, Laurel, was wounded in action.

Hearing Slated On Plan to Move Federal Agencies

Legislation partially to disperse key Government agencies into nearby Maryland and Virginia will be considered at a public hearing before a Senate Public Works Subcommittee, starting at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Administration witnesses will include Jess Larson, General Services administrator, and W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings.

The officials testified last week before the House Public Works Committee on an identical bill.

Senator Spessard Holland (D., Fla.), is subcommittee chairman.

Yanks Penned Grateful Note, Reds Boast

A 23-year-old Washington lieutenant, twice decorated and once previously wounded, was cited yesterday by the Chinese Red radio as one of 10 prisoners who signed a letter of appreciation for kind treatment.

Wood

The broadcast, heard by the Associated Press in San Francisco, listed one of the signers as "Robert I. Wood, a new graduate from Georgetown University."

Except for a wrong middle initial, the man is believed to be Second Lieut. Robert S. Wood, the son of Col. and Mrs. Walter S. Wood, USA (ret.), of 2311 Connecticut ave. nw.

Lieut. Wood spent three years in Georgetown's School of Foreign Service, then took his degree at Mexico City College.

A member of the ROTC at Georgetown, Wood was commissioned last March, called up at the end of April, and sailed immediately for Japan, his father said.

Just before he sailed, he married the former Betsy Mollison, daughter of Brig. Gen. James Mollison, USAF, retired. She lives at 3140 Wisconsin ave. nw.

4 Killed as Moslems Riot in Singapore

the Convent of the Good Shepherd, where Maria Bertha stayed with her mother, Mrs. Adeline Hertogh, unttil they were moved by authorities. The mobs had threatened to kidnap the child, kill the mother and burn down the convent.

The violence began Monday when an appellate tribunal opened tot decide whether Mrs. Hertogh should take her daughter to Holland before an appeal by the child's foster mother and husband is heard. The Malayan nurse, Che Aminah, and the schoolteacher husband, Inche Mansoor Abadi, sought a reversal of the supreme court's decision to give the child back to her Dutch parents. They lost her eight years ago during the Japanese occupation of Java.

Police attempted to disperse the crowd around the Supreme Court Building, where the Appellate Court was in session. The crowd grew rapidly to a seething mass of stone-hurling and bottle-wielding fanatics.

When the hearing was adjourned for the day, judges, lawyers and Dutch and British officials were forced to barricade themselves behind the building's iron gates while phalanxes of police tried to drive them back.

Then began a wave of violence against Europeans. More than 50 cars and trucks were overturned. Rioters poured gasoline over the wrecked vehicles and set them afire.

Thousands of suburb dwellers were marooned in the homes of friends and relatives in the city last night. In the swank Capitol Restaurant, 18 Britons barricaded themselves.

Masterson was not seriously injured but was kept in the hospital. He was driving with Allen when the Moslem mob ordered them to stop. An eyewitness said the Moslems attacked Masterson, set fire to the car and were about to throw him into the fire when an Indian rescued him and helped him into a taxi.

Art Show Near End

The collection of American historical art, "American Processional," will be shown at Corcoran Gallery for only seven days. The exhibition will end Sunday, December 17.

Red Plan Failed, MacArthur Says

day in a fighting retreat that cost the Marines alone 30 percent casualties.

A Marine Corps spokesman in Washington estimated Marine casualties were somewhere between those of Peleliu's 6500 and Tarawa's 3300 in World War II.

Army casualties were not estimated, nor was the percentage of Marine dead.

All Out of Danger Zone

The 60-mile march through cruel mountains in 25-below-zero weather from Yudam to the haven of the coastal plain was "one of the outstanding operations in military annals," said Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, Tenth Corps commander.

In the blood-stained wake of the march lay the bodies of more than 15,000 Chinese and the wreckage of seven Red Chinese divisions which had surrounded and tried in vain to halt the retreat column in 12 days of vicious conflict.

Tenth Corps dispatches late Monday said the last man and last vehicle of the rearguard were out of the danger zone by Monday night.

United States transports were at hand in Hungnam if orders for its evacuation are given.

However, there still was an American force last reported deep inside northeast Korea attempting to reach the east coast.

Some 6000 to 8000 troops of the Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team of the United States Seventh Division were last reported beating their way back from the Manchurian border town of Hyesanjin.

Their route to the sea is more than double the 60-mile distance the Marines had to travel. It is beset by treacherous roads, 7000-foot mountain passes deep with snow, and an unknown number of Communist troops.

Planes Have Good Weather

Security measures shrouded the positions of two Republic of Korea divisions—the Capital and Third. They last were reported north of Hambung and pulling back.

The progress of none of these three forces has been revealed by MacArthur's headquarters.

Air drops were the only means of supply, and these were not being mentioned.

Clear weather Monday permitted Navy and Marine planes to throw a heavy umbrella of protective aircraft over the last elements of the tattered Marine retreat column as it cleared high mountain passes and began its descent to the coastal plain.

It was feared that Chinese might swarm down on them in a final attack as wrote Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert. This failed to develop. Chinese resistance was sporadic and consisted mainly of an ambush-roadblock before dawn.

The rear guard took comparatively light casualties and lost some equipment.

Ground Forces Strafed

Navy and Marine fliers, rocketing and strafing Chinese ground forces all day Sunday and Monday, estimated at least 2650 Reds were killed or wounded from the air alone.

The Air Force sent B-29s, and fighter bombers—including brand new 600-mile-per-hour-plus F-84 Thunderjets—over the uneasy northwest front.

While ground fighting in the Eighth Army sector in west-central Korea was confined to a single firefight by United States Twenty-fourth Division patrols, the Air Force spotted and attacked Reds seeping steadily southward.

More than 1550 casualties were inflicted by warplanes on Red troop concentrations in a half-dozen areas.

From the official war summaries by General MacArthur's headquarters, it appeared that Red troops—either Korean guerillas or Chinese — were lodged in Haeju, a west coast port just north of the thirty-eighth parallel and only 62 miles northwest of Seoul.

The Air Force reported 500 casualties inflicted on enemy troops near Taeju and an additional 200 Reds at Paegu, northwest of Haeju.

Refugees Swarm South

On Sunday some 2000 to 3000 Communist troops in black and gray uniforms were reported in Haeju by MacArthur's headquarters.

A great crowd of refugees, estimated at 20,000 jammed Haeju while an enormous exodus of North Korean civilians continued to plod southward, seeking to escape the Chinese Communist advance.

A hint that the town of Koksan, about 50 miles southeast of Pyongyang, was in Red hands was contained in MacArthur's war summary late Monday.

It said a concentration area for Communist supplies was loated in a rough circle of 110 square miles "with its center at Chudong and its northern extremity at Koksan."

Convoy Blasted

Koksan once was the right end of a 70-mile line established by Eighth Army forces as they withdrew south last week.

The line was within 25 miles south of Pyongyang at points.

The Air Force reported that 650 Communist troops were killed or wounded northwest of Sariwon while two convoys—each containing some 50 vehicles—were blasted near Sariwon.

Air reports made clear that the Chinese were continuing a heavy movement of reinforcements and supplies from their Manchurian "sanctuary" to the northwest front. These were streaming down the Sinuiju highway toward the Chongchon River road and rail junction of Sinanju—a distance of 65 air miles. Much of the movement was at night when Allied planes were at a disadvantage.

General MacArthur's summary acknowledged that North Korea guerillas were regrouped and showing a greater degree of organization in the Sibyon area, 20 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel in central Korea.

U. N. forces—probably South Korean troops—made about a 1-mile advance against guerilla groups in the Hwachon area. Hwachon is 6 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel and 52 miles inland from the east coast.

Philippine, British Commonwealth and Thailand troops were on the U. N. line but only the Filipinos were engaged. They dispersed two enemy guerilla groups and destroyed a small number of the Reds.

MOVEMENTS SECRET—With Marines and GIs from the Changjin Reservoir area trap now safe in the Hamhung-Hungnam area (1), attention focused on two other United Nations units (2) who were working their way back from isolated points in North Korea. Security blackout hid the positions of 6000 to 8000 troops of the United States Seventh Division Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team, last reported on the Manchurian border at Hyesanjin, and of two South Korean divisions pulling back on the east coast north of Hamhung. Little activity was reported on the northwest defense line (3), although it appeared that Koksan (underlined) was in Red hands. Guerilla forces were at Haeju and others were reported active near Sibyon (both underlined) rea were volunteers over whom the Peiping government had no control; that the United States was the real aggressor in Korea; and that all "foreign troops"—meaning U. N. forces—should be withdrawn from Korea.

Debate on the resolution already had gone far past the deadline originally contemplated for it. But there was a marked tendency for delegates to go slow until they saw whether the Asia-Arab proposals took concrete form and whetner Peiping would answer their week-old appeal for a halt at the thirty-eighth parallel.

Until a late hour today there was no answer and Rau said after weekend conferences with Gen. Wu Hsiu-chuan, chief of the Red China mission here, that he has not received any promises from the Communists.

Pope Urges Spirit for Peace

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 11 (AP).—Pope Pius XII said today threats to world peace would fade away if humanity were permeated by the spirit of the thousands who came to Rome for the 1950 Holy Year.

He spoke at a secret consistory summoned to designate those who will close the symbolic holy doors on Christmas Eve, ending the Holy Year, the twenty-fifth in the church's nearly 2000 years.

The pontiff, who will himself close the holy door of St. Peter's, designated three cardinals to officiate at the closing of holy doors of three other patriarchal basilicas in Rome at the final ceremony of the Holy Year.

"May heaven will," the pontiff told the 13 cardinals at the consistory, "that the mutual concord of aims and hearts may permeate the life not only of those who came to Rome, but also of all others under the inspiration of the example and the zeal of those who have returned from the holy tour.

"If this, eventually, with God's help, should occur in all parts of the world, then the perils which seem to threaten the preservation of peace will disappear. And for the human family, tormented by so many discords and betrayed by so many enmities and false promises, there will shine that true peace which, based on justice and nourished by charity, is the ardent wish and desire of everyone."

The holy doors symbolize the opening to humanity of the doorway to repentance and forgiveness. When the doors are closed they will be bricked up until another holy year is decreed.

Court Backs Refusal of Testimony on Red Link

ment as it has been interpreted from the beginning."

Justice Department officials did not want to be quoted by name but they admitted the ruling will affect witnesses before congressional committees and various Government agencies as well as grand juries. However, it will not affect contempt proceedings against those who do not plead self-incrimination.

In other actions yesterday the Supreme Court:

1. Ruled, 7 to 1, that the Attorney General's refusal to suspend deportation proceedings against an alien is subject to court review. The case involved a Danish citizen who came here to see the 1939 World's Fair and was trapped by the war. Justice Stanley F. Reed delivered the opinion, with Justice William O. Douglas dissenting and with Justice Clark taking no part.

Justice Robert H. Jackson, Attorney General at the time the incident occurred, gave himself a verbal spanking in a concurring opinion. He said his opinion then was "as foggy as the statute" he was trying to interpret.

2. Upheld, 5 to 3, wartime orders canceling the American citizenship of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Ackermann. Justice Sherman Minton spoke for the court, with Justices Black, Felix Frankfurter and Douglas dissenting. Justice Clark took no part. Black charged the majority with sticking to the letter of the law so tightly that its "arteries are hardened . . ."

3. Upheld, 8 to 1, Oklahoma's right to fix a minimum price for natural gas taken from the State's Guymon-Hugoton field. Justice Clark delivered the opinion, with Justice Black dissenting. In a companion case, the court also split 8 to 1. Involved was the Cities Service Gas Co., which buys, produces and transports natural gas.

4. Agreed to consider four cases involving the Taft-Hartley labor law's provision against secondary boycotts. Three involve construction unions and the fourth the Teamsters' Union.

5. Agreed to rule on an Alexandria, La., ordinance banning door-to-door magazine salesmen, book agents and other peddlers.

6. Agreed to hear an appeal by members of the California State Senate Committee on Un-American Activities in their fight against a $250,000 damage suit charging violation of civil rights. The case was brought by William Patrick Brandhove after his arrest on a misdemeanor charge for refusing to testify. He claimed he was subpenaed in order to suppress his right of free speech.

The court's next session will be on January 2.

Thomas Tells Of Red Line

Thomas said, he searched his conscience, talked with people, and decided to make a complete break with all his Communist ties, and to cooperate in the committee hearings. The one person who more than any other determined this decision, Thomas testified, was his widowed mother, Mrs. Mattie Thomas, 65, of 1222 Canal st. sw.

"Even though I've neglected her for eight or nine years, my mother still loves me like a new-born baby," declared the slim labor leader, who's in his early thirties. "I love her, too, and I have the highest regard for her. Maybe I wouldn't have become a Communist if I hadn't strayed away from her."

Thomas, who had earlier testified that he was recruited to the Communist ranks when, broke and hungry, he had been given a helping hand by a local Communist leader, also blamed lack of educational opportunity as another reason for his being attracted into the Red orbit.

Is Ready to Suffer

Thomas, completing two days of testimony before the committee, said he was "ready to suffer" if there was anything he had done as a Communist which had violated the law. Later, asked by reporters whether his testimony indicated that he had violated the Taft-Hartley Act's non-Communist oath, Thomas replied in the negative.

A number of labor leaders in the past 18 months have resigned from formal affiliation with the Communist Party, and after having signed the non-Communist oath have nontheless followed the party line. Although the Justice Department has been investigating a number of these self-proclaimed ex-Communist, none has been prosecuted. Justice Department officials have held that it is virtually impossible to prove violation of the Taft-Hartley law oath provision.

In yesterday's testimony, Thomas disclosed that in April, 1949, he officially resigned from the Communist Party, which he had joined in the mid-thirties; and that a few days later he had signed the non-Communist oath. He admitted, however, predating the resignation letter back to February.

Talked With Bosses

Thomas maintained that he resigned from the party and took the non-Communist oath on his own responsibility, not on any orders from the Communist leadership. He added, nonetheless, that before taking the double-step, he discussed the matter with Philip Frankfeld and William Taylor, the Communist bosses in this area. They advised him, Thomas said, to use his own discreation, but that if they were Thomas, they would resign from the party and sign the affidavit.

Following his resignation from the party, Thomas said, he was lectured to by Frankfeld, chairman of the D. C.-Maryland Communist Party. Frankfeld said, according to Thomas, that even though Thomas was no longer a member of the party, Thomas shouldn't forget the teachings, training and avice of the party.

"The way he (Frankfeld) said it," Thomas testified, "we were to carry on certain activities without our being in the party. We were still to follow the Communist party line."

Thomas confessed yesterday that he did indeed not forget the party line, that he met with Communist leaders on at least five occasions, and that, on his own discretion, he had decided to follow out some of their advice.

Adhered to "Line"

As recently as last summer, with the outbreak of the Korean war, Thomas followed the line and "instinctviely" opposed a union resolution supporting the United Nations' stand in Korea. As a Communist, Thomas explained, he had been instilled with the idea of opposing anything indorsed by the American Government. Now, Thomas bemoaned, he was tired of being against things all the time, and he wants to be for some things.

In winding up his two days of testimony, Thomas declared that he was speaking from his conscience and was willing to accept his fate, come what may. "My destiny rests in the hands of God," he cried.

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), chairman of the subcommittee delving into Communist activities here, thanked Thomas for his cooperative testimony. "It took courage," Walter commented.

Today, the committee will hear Tom Sampler, secretary-treasurer of Local 74, who was part of the original Communist cell which seized power in the union. Later Sampler broke with Thomas and, he says, with the party. Sampler has already testified in private before committee aides, and it is believed his testimony initiated the current Communist probe here.

Gulf States Get $30-Million Break in Court

The Supreme Court yesterday gave Texas and Louisiana a multi-million-dollar break in what may be the final decision in the long-drawn-out fight over the oil-rich tidelands.

The court turned down pleas by both States for another hearing on last June's ruling that the paramount interest in the off-shore areas belongs to the Federal Government.

But in ordering the States to account for the money they have taken in as bonuses, rentals and royalties, the court turned down the Justice Department's plea to go back to the date of the earlier California tidelands decision of June 23, 1947.

The three-year difference in dates will cost the Government about 30 million dollars, one Federal official estimated, about two-thirds of it from Louisiana. But it may cool congressional tempers enough to permit passage of legislation to allow the Government to grant new leases within the long-disputed areas.

Soon after the court ruling, Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman announced that he is authorizing oil and gas operations now under way to continue for 60 days without penalty while producers negotiate for rights to continue beyond that.

Since mid-November, rentals from the Louisiana tidelands have been paid to the United States. Chapman said the money will be retained until Congress directs what is to be done with it.

Lane Spares Life Of Convicted Slayer

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 11 (AP). Governor Lane today commuted the death sentence of Delmas E. Bozman, 24-year-old Coast Guardsman who killed a Baltimore cab driver, to life imprisonment.

Bozman shot and killed Cornelius A. McDowell from the back seat of a taxi on May 22, 1948.

"Under all the circumstances of this case, while I condemn him for the crime that he committed, I will not sign his death warrant," Lane said.

Paris Police Stop Reds Before Row

PARIS, Dec. 11 (AP).—Police today peacefully dispersed some 2000 demonstrators called by the Communist Party to petition President Vincent Auriol against rearming Germany.

A plate-glass window was broken on the elegant Faubourg St. Honore, opposite Auriol's Elysee Palace, but there was no report of anyone seriously hurt. Everyone appeared in good humor, and the police did not wear their steel helmets.

The demonstrators gave frequent renditions of the Marseillaise and chanted by turns: "We want peace, MacArthur is a murderer" and "No arms for the Nazis."

4. There was "considerable hollering" in the hearing yesterday by some members about the requested $30,000 item to buy uniforms for 400 auxiliary policemen. Some members thought the uniform request was either excessive or unnecessary.

The subcommittee decision reduced itself to a "question of timing," a member said. "Everyone felt the District would get the funds somehow," he added.

The largest single outlay planned from the requested $337,500 would purchase a citywide warning system.

Four Sirens Planned

At present, only four sirens are about to be ordered—for the Capitol, the White House and the State Department. Cost of these will come from the original $100,000 appropriation.

Capt. John E. Fondahl, acting civil defense director for the District, said the "committee's decision will delay us by that much in certain things we want to do. Action in January will be a big help."

The new request would pay for 30 warning devices, radio equipment, microfilming vital records, uniforms for auxiliary police, fire department equipment and office supplies.

Meanwhile, Congress continued to hear demands for prompt action on the Administration's bill to establish a permanent Federal civil defense agency.

Yesterday Governors Frank J. Lausche of Ohio and Val Peterson of Nebraska urged the Senate Armed Services Committee to act promptly.

They Lack Guidance

Lausche, president of the Council of State Governments, said cities are holding back on their air-raid defenses, pending clear-cut leadership. The "chief gripe," he said, is that "we have no guidance."

Peterson suggested Congress pass a resolution giving advance consent to States to enter into mutual aid compacts for civil defense protection, if it cannot approve the over-all legislation in the lame duck session.

Reds Ask New Austria Talks

LONDON, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Russia proposed today a new pre-Christmas conference on the Austrian peace treaty.

A foreign office spokesman announced the Russian proposal to hold another meeting of the Austrian treaty deputies at a press conference. The suggested date was next Friday.

The Austrian treaty has been near completion for many months. All Russia has to do is to say "yes" to a couple of minor points and the treaty will be completed.

The Austrian treaty has been held up by the Western powers as an example of what Russia could do to show its sincerity in wanting to negotiate. It will not be known until later this week whether Russia is now willing to complete that treaty.

The deputies have met 257 times in three years. During recent months the meetings have been monopolized by Russian tirades against the West for alleged violations of the Italian peace treaty on Trieste.

home from the one next door. Nearby was a sign, "Beware the Dog."

A November 26 newspaper, which apparently had been wrapped around the shotgun's barrel, lay on the grass. The gun itself, an ancient 12-gauge, discarded as the assassin fled, was so old detectives couldn't identify its make.

Rummel had telephoned his wife, Norma, about 11 o'clock last night that he would be late.

She said she switched on big lights that illuminated the garage, and the 35 steps up a steep slope to the house. Then she went to bed. Rummel's brother-in-law, Jack Sanford, said he heard an explosion about 1:30 a. m., which he thought was an automobile backfire.

The police crime laboratory, Parker revealed, found fingerprints on the shotgun, an unexploded shell and a clear heel print.

Rummel also was attorney for Harold (Happy) Meltzer, erstwhile Cohen aide charged with carrying a gun. A jury failed to agree in Meltzer's case last year. This year, when it came up for retrial, Meltzer switched lawyers and was acquitted. But Cohen and Meltzer had split, meantime. Some observers said this was the reason Rummel had withdrawn from the second trial.

In Trouble in 1941

Rummel was in trouble himself in 1941, accused of taking $1669 from a client on representation that he could quash an expected murder charge. The client, wealthy contractor Dale Henderson, alleged that Rummel already knew, when he demanded the money, that police had put the death of his wife, Madelyn, down as a suicide.

Rummel's death brought to three the number of close Cohen assocates slain in two years. In 1948 two shotgun-toting men entered Cohen's Sunset Strip haberdashery, killed Harry (Hooky) Rohman and wounded two other aides.

Last year, Herbert was fatally wounded outside a Sunset Strip restaurant.

Helicopters in Korea prove again that—

"all the years of work are worth it— when the pay-off is performance."

WHEREVER A FOOT SOLDIER GOES, a helicopter can go, too . . . to evacuate wounded . . . to bring up supplies and munitions . . . to spot enemy positions . . . and to give ground troops a type of support never before available.

Ashore or with the fleet, helicopters in Korea have proved to be one of the most versatile and useful military vehicles ever used in combat.

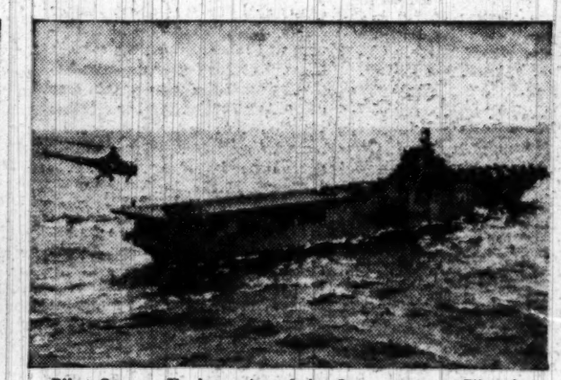
And at this writing, the only helicopters reported in service in Korea are Sikorsky helicopters.

The combat performance of this amazing aircraft can be traced directly to the foresight of Sikorsky engineers and military and naval airmen who teamed up 11 years ago to develop a practical helicopter. The first partial measure of their success was the performance of Sikorsky helicopters introduced toward the end of World War II.

The full measure of the worth of this long cooperative effort has been the performance under fire of Sikorsky helicopters in Korea. Although necessarily employed in only limited numbers, their value to our troops fighting against overwhelming odds has proved again that all the years of work are worth it when the pay-off is performance.

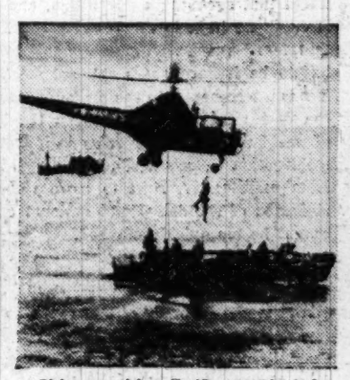
Taxi-on-the-fly. U. S. Navy helicopters save precious time taxiing needed officers and specialists from ship to shore, making possible hour-to-hour coordination between the fleet and ground units.

Outpost Link. A Marine Sikorsky helicopter takes off from a mountain outpost in Korea. Besides depositing men in otherwise inaccessible posts, the helicopter will keep them supplied and be a constant link with the main body.



Pilot-Saver. Each carrier of the fleet now uses Sikorsky helicopters as plane guards, thereby releasing destroyers for other duties. Quickly and efficiently, "ditched" pilots are pulled from the water and deposited on deck.

Air Ambulance. Fastest evacuation possible has been given hundreds of wounded G. I.'s—many of whom might not have survived an overland journey. This litter, fastened by special attachments to the side of the Air Rescue Service's Sikorsky, will be covered by ventilated plastic top.



Ship-to-ship. Swift transfer of personnel within the fleet is constantly carried out by Sikorsky helicopters. Here a noncom is transferred from flagship to landing craft in the midst of combat operations in Inchon Harbor.

Convoy-Cover. A truck convoy pauses momentarily as a "seeing-eye" helicopter prepares to scout ahead of ground troops. When the enemy position is spotted, the Air Force pilot relays information to commanders in the field.

"Marine helicopters in Korea are adding a new chapter to the history of military science," said this Marine General, shown with an Army General alighting from first U. N. aircraft to land on Kimpo airfield.

High-ranking officers of all services paid similar tribute with these words: "Any military force without them is back in the days of the Civil War." "Helicopters can do everything." "There are no superlatives adequate to describe the general reaction to the helicopter."

It Was Tough

What the First Marine Division has just proved, in its grueling march from Koto toward the sea, is that heroism is born anew every generation. The conditions the Marines had to face in their 50-mile retreat—an enemy in well-nigh overwhelming strength plus the 25-below-zero Korean winter—were tough beyond description. But the Marines, and their colleagues of the Seventh Army Division along with a contingent of British commandos, were tougher. Few Americans who were not there can understand fully what their fighting men went through, but most persons will appreciate the nature of the sacrifice from the comment that it was worse than Tarawa.

Tarawa was, of course, a totally different type of operation not comparable to the breakout from the trap in northeast Korea. In the present instance the task of the Marines and the Seventh Division elements was to save themselves as fighting units—to force their way through the encirclement and push a narrow corridor across mountains and chasms to the coastal city of Hungnam so that they and their equipment could be evacuated by sea. This they have done despite a 30 percent casualty rate at the hands of the enemy and the weather. One regimental combat team which had fought to the Manchurian border is still in considerable danger, but the remainder of the imperiled Tenth Corps now seems to be safe. This is an immense accomplishment reflecting not only great courage but also leadership of a high order both among the Marines and in the units facilitating the escape.

While a feeling of relief certainly is warranted, excessive optimism is not. General MacArthur's statement that "the command for the time being is relatively secure" is confident but cautious. Meanwhile, reports persist that plans are being laid for a general evacuation from Korea. The MacArthur assertion does not preclude this. It means merely that the United Nations forces are for the most part intact and the retreat has been orderly. The answer to how secure they are depends, however, on the intentions of the Chinese, for the U. N. armies cannot be expected to do much more than delay the Chinese masses if they are determined to drive all the way down the peninsula. The one encouraging point is that the disaster phase has been passed and that rescue of the U. N. forces is now possible if that should prove necessary.

Essential Trimming

Elmer B. Staats, assistant director of the Federal Budget Bureau, recently forecast that the presidential budget message will recommend elimination of all Federal grants to housing authorities for any purpose except the purchase of sites. Half of the 150 million dollars appropriated for hospital construction, he said, has been placed in reserve and will not be available. These cutbacks are necessary not only because the Federal Government is faced with huge military expenditures, but also because the construction of new housing and hospitals increases demands for scarce materials and labor. Since our productive resources are limited, the needs of national defense are a compelling reason for deferring work on slum clearance and nonessential housing projects.

For the same reason drastic reductions in public works expenditures are essential. To be sure, primary highways are as essential to national security as steel mills, but many road projects contribute nothing to national defense. That is also true of many reclamation and electrification projects that help to swell the Government's budgeted expenses.

Substantial cuts can be made in other spending activities. The cost of CCC price-support operations, for instance, has been greatly reduced owing to the rise of farm prices and actual shortages of many basic farm products. Sharp reductions in the economic foreign-aid program are in order in view of the progress made by ECA countries and the introduction of military aid. Federal educational and relief grants can also be trimmed, since booming business insures full employment and enables State and local governments to extract more revenue from the income stream. Regional shifts of population resulting from expansion of defense industries will relieve school and housing shortages in some places and increase them elsewhere. Federal aid on a selective basis may be the solution of this problem.

As the Committee for Economic Development warns, "many expenditures of the Federal Government that are classified as 'nonmilitary' are essential to the national security; they cannot be reduced and may even have to be expanded. The situation does not call for indiscriminate slashes, in Government or elsewhere." Nevertheless, it is quite evident that a good many billions of dollars can be saved by eliminating, reducing or postponing contemplated outlays without inflicting undue hardship on the civilian population. The sacrifices entailed will be compensated for by a shrinkage of Federal deficits, reduced pressure on prices, and a speedup of defense production that would otherwise be impeded by civilian competition for manpower and strategic materials.

National Emergency

President Truman's bipartisan conference on Wednesday to discuss the proclaiming of a national emergency is to be applauded even if it has no other purpose than to alert the American people to the danger confronting them. Business as usual, price and wage increases as usual, pleasure as usual and politics as usual are still being pursued on a wide scale. There is a strong disposition to clutch at every flimsy thread of rumor that a peace settlement may be in the offing as an excuse for postponing the day when we buckle down to the gigantic task of preparing ourselves for either war or an uneasy armed peace. In a world where aggression is rampant it is a perilous business to let our hopes so far outrun our preparation to deal with grim realities.

Many will recall that President Roosevelt declared an unlimited national emergency more than six months before Pearl Harbor. It came at a time when Hitlerism was sweeping over Europe and Africa and daily becoming a greater menace to our own national security. But American troops were not yet engaged in the fighting and we had taken upon ourselves only the commitment of acting as the "arsenal of democracy." Today most of our effective troops are in peril in faraway Korea, and we have an enormous commitment to join in the defense of western Europe. The need for proclamation of a national emergency is even greater today than it was in 1941.

Incidentally, the national emergency proclaimed 9½ years ago is still in effect. But it has no significance in relation to the present situation. The new emergency demands recognition on its own account. No doubt the effect will be to bring into play minor executive powers not now being exercised, but for the most part it is not a question of powers. Congress gave the President all the authority he needs in the sweeping Defense Production Act of last September. The most pressing requirement at present is specific rearmament goals and adjustment of our national economy for prompt achievement of those goals. In our opinion, there should no longer be any hesitation in acquiring the machine tools, plants, and trained personnel for full-scale wartime production under the pressure that a state of national emergency will give. Freedom cannot be defended on a shoestring against the vast armies that Moscow is able to put into motion in the cause of aggression.

Industrial mobilization on such a scale will certainly hasten the imposition of tighter controls over strategic materials and the application of wage and price controls as soon as is feasible. We think the people are ready for this. Public opinion seems to be demanding that the Administration move much faster than it has done in preparing for the worst, and that will necessarily mean tighter controls to avert chaos and frustration. Harder work and temporary restraints upon free enterprise will be small prices to pay for the avoidance of another Pearl Harbor—or another Korea.

An emergency proclamation will not necessarily be a prelude to general war. On the contrary, it is the weakness of the free world that encourages aggression, and the strength we hope to acquire may avert the threatened attacks. Apparently this lesson has to be learned again and again. That fact is a testimonial to the profound American desire for peace, but, given the kind of world we live in, our delay in industrial mobilization reflects a dangerous shrinking from realities. A shift to more rigorous measures of self-denial and national effort cannot be too quickly effected.

Criminal Getaway

Add to the company of Senators who are impeding the work of the Kefauver Crime Committee the name of the senior Senator from Nevada, Pat McCarran. Last Monday Senator Kefauver introduced a resolution calling for the Senate to authorize arrest warrants for 11 key witnesses who had evaded the service of subpenas. Majority Leader Lucas, for reasons of his own, put off a vote and referred the question to the Judiciary Committee, which was requested to report on Friday. On Wednesday, however, Senator McCarran, the committee chairman, appeared on the floor with a motion to delay the report of the committee until December 18. The motion was passed by a handful of votes while Senator Kefauver was presiding over a committee hearing elsewhere.

What then ensued on a motion by Senator Lucas to reconsider the delay, and an immediate motion by Mr. McCarran to table the motion to reconsider, is best told by excerpts from the Congressional Record:

> Mr. Wherry. Mr. President, I voted in favor of the motion of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. At the time there were only five or six Senators on the floor. I do not wish to ask for a quorum call at this late hour, but I think that in all fairness if some Senators do not agree with the action taken because so few members of the Senate were present, they should have an opportunity to file a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to . . .
> Mr. McCarran. If ample time were available, I believe the Senator from Nebraska would be justified in taking the position which he now takes. However, it is only a question of asking for more time.
> Mr. Wherry. . . . We are confronted with a motion which will practically bar further consideration of the resolution of the Senator from Tennessee. I hope the Senator will withdraw his motion.
> Mr. McCarran. I will withdraw my motion if the Senator from Illinois will withdraw his motion.
> Mr. Lucas. If the Senator from Nebraska withdraws his motion, of course, I shall also withdraw my motion.

The upshot of this clubby little exercise in democracy as practiced in the Senate is that the racketeers among the 11 witnesses have just that much more time to hide. Most interesting of all is Senator McCarran's dual standard of time. How does it happen that time is so urgent a matter to him when pressing a motion for delay behind Senator Kefauver's back, and so leisurely an affair when it comes to a stiff measure to crack down on racketeers?

Truce To Partisanship

Republican leaders in Congress appear to be assuming a more responsible attitude toward the world crisis. While many of them continue to feel that Secretary Acheson should resign, they are coming to acknowledge that a partisan demand for his scalp at this time would be a devastating blow to free world unity. Senator Ives' statement that he certainly does not want to force any action that would occasion disunity sounds like a prelude to amendment of his resolution so as to eliminate any call upon Mr. Acheson to resign. We hope that he will do so and that the Republican leadership in Congress will acquiesce, for the situation in the Far East is too perilous to permit partisan squabbling at home.

Governor Dewey's implied rebuke to those members of his party who have been inclined to play politics with the Korean disaster has doubtless had a constructive influence. As Mr. Dewey says, the fate of the world depends on the "decisions that are made and the skill and speed with which we belatedly mobilize our own strength and find out who are our friends are in the world." Political bickering creates distrust of our stability of purpose and hampers Government efforts to reach decisions that will further our aim of combating aggression. Already our prestige is at low ebb and other free nations are showing an increasing unwillingness to follow our leadership. To restore their waning confidence it is imperative to present a united front to the world and abjure the partisan sniping that alienates our friends and gives aid and comfort to our enemies.

Discussion and criticism of policies still in the formative stage are not precluded by Governor Dewey's appeal for unity. Once decisions have been reached, however, the backward-looking critics who attack the Administration for past errors and the critics whose disaffection stems from mere partisanship are unwitting allies of those who would destroy us.

Income Levels

Family income levels for 1949, on which the Census Bureau will soon release a study, are expected to show continuance of the progress toward better family living. In the recent Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth there was concern over so many of the Nation's children being in lower income families. But the fact remains that American children now have the best living level in their history and the best in the world.

Moreover, the concentration of children in low-income families is not as pronounced as we had thought, and as we said on this page recently—taking our figures from an erroneous official statement. A little less than half—not 75 percent—of the children in America are to be found in families whose income is $3000 or less. Since farmers have by far the largest families, a high percentage of these children of low-income parents are in rural areas where families raise some of their own food. This compensates in part for lower cash income.

High employment and general prosperity have accompanied and been partly responsible for the high birth rate of the 1940's. Between 1944 and 1948 the median family income increased from $2500 to $3200, and the proportion of families making $5000 and over increased from 12 to 21 percent. All this is helping to give American children a better start in life. Even in low-income families nutrition is reported improved and community services, such as school lunches, aid for dependent children and unemployment insurance, have helped the poorer child's lot. Yet a great deal remains to be done for the many children on the ragged edge of better living. The White House Conference recommended that specific efforts be made to bring lower income groups to a higher income level and to increase their real income by providing more community services.

FALL OF THE YEAR

When tall oats part before the breasts of horses,
how to the reaper,
the heart enters a place of rest.

Is it harvest against winter,
when grain falls under blade and sky
that makes the heart rise as to a friend?

Is it the bright hair of children bending over sheaves
and voices small in sunlight?
They are strangers; it is not you they call.

Is it the fall of the year, earth changing
under thunder of hoofs,
leaving the sheared stalk? Once it was these that moved the heart. But now you stand as on an island, knowing the memory,

the dream of peace.

Strength In The Air

Allow me to commend Mr. Livingston Hartley upon his grasp of a new concept of warfare in his letter of December 3. The public, and indeed military personnel, should give more thought to the kind of warfare that Mr. Hartley envisions and less to the old methods of land warfare. As Mr. Hartley implies, this kind of warfare is practically the only method we can apply against the Communists in China with assurance of success. And it is also applicable against any other potential enemy. To assure success in any war now, air superiority must be obtained.

We ask nothing and we receive nothing by our land occupation of a conquered country. On the other hand, we spend billions in treasure and undergo untold suffering and hardship by our occupation of conquered territory just for the purpose of rehabilitating our former foes! This in itself is absurd.

Phase one of a future war is recognized to be the phase in which air superiority must be gained if the war is to be won. If phase one is lost, the war is as good as lost. No nation can live under an air umbrella of enemy planes. If a nation can be subjected to effective air attacks at the will of its enemy, it only remains for this enemy to make these attacks unbearable and he has won the war. We must make ourselves masters of air warfare in order to survive.

As mastery of the air is a prerequisite for our survival and we are unable to escape the necessity of building up huge air power it is only a matter of logic to expand this power to the point where it will meet our needs under any given situation.

Why should we use ground divisions, corps and armies when the fire power of comparable air units is vastly more devastating and the personnel involved not only vastly smaller but in keeping with our traditional supremacy in science and mechanics?

S. MARCUS BUTLER.

Chinese Nationalists

Mao Tze-tung, head of Communist China, admitted in his June 13, 1950, "state of the union" broadcast that there are 400,000 guerillas harassing the Chinese government, while the Chinese Nationalists of Formosa say their number far exceeds one million. As Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, former head of the Flying Tigers in China during World War II, said: "The United States hasn't got enough people to win a war in China. Our only chance is to arm the Chinese Nationalists and let them do the fighting."

A million of Chinese anti-Communist guerillas now existing in China, plus nearly 500,000 Chinese Nationalists on Formosa, can so disorganize and defeat Communist China that all its aggressiveness would evaporate, and the free world could breathe freely again. That the armies of Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa and the Chinese guerillas have what it takes to give the Chinese Communists a good fight, is proved by the fact that they already have had a foretaste of Communist misrule and slavery and now prefer cheerfully to undergo the privations and hardships of outlaws in the mountains of China, or rigorous training and frugal existence on Formosa, to becoming slaves in Communist China.

President Truman and Secretary Acheson tell us they want to localize the Korean war. They certainly accomplished that by permitting the crack Fourth Chinese Communist army numbering more than 200,000 men under Gen. Lin Piao which was stationed till June of this year in South China to guard against depredations and invasion by the Nationalist Chinese from Formosa, to be moved north first to Manchuria and then to Korea. The Communists could not have afforded to move this army to Korea if the Chinese Nationalists of Formosa had been permitted and encouraged to harass and invade South China, by our supplying them with arms and anti-Communist propaganda. That would not have localized the war but would have saved the lives of thousands of our boys in Korea, brought up our prestige and victory, and would have cost us perhaps only a few million dollars instead of billions in Korea.

Preventive War

Orchids to Maj. Gen. Orvil A. Anderson the man who stated that "waiting until you're hit first" is un-American and that he could wipe out Russia's five A-bomb nests in a week." Maybe he could do just that! Air Force General Vandenberg didn't like it so he ousted Anderson and ostracized him for his Air War College talks about "preventive war." Why, oh why, should a man with a good practical idea to save lives, money and time be suppressed?

Confidence In Acheson

Pose any question before the American people and there is a sizable stable of jackasses who rear up on their hind feet and bray out to the world what the American people think.

I'm a trifle weary of being told what I think by these self-appointed spokesmen. Currently a group is employing one of these fictitious "mandates from the people" in their efforts to perpetrate a vicious blackmail on the President and the country. As a means of satisfying their almost pathological desire for Secretary Acheson's scalp they are threatening the country and the President with noncooperation during this period of grave emergency unless the man is removed.

And, of course, not having the courage to state and stand on their real reasons, they are screaming that the American people have lost confidence in Mr. Acheson. Well, I haven't the authority to speak for all my fellow citizens, but here is at least one who hasn't lost confidence in the Secretary of State. In fact, he is one of an all too small number of public servants in whom I do have confidence.

And now where are the Democrats, and Republicans, in and out of Congress who should have the integrity and courage to brand this thing for what it is—a revolting and dangerous campaign of irresponsibility by a dreary band of ill-willed men?

Mr. Truman And Mr. Hume

When one enters the field of music and art, and goes before the public for their judgment, one of the expected results is the comments of the critics. Mr. Hume acknowledged that Miss Truman had grace, charm and courage. He said her voice was not so hot. That's been said before about better singers. Time will tell if Miss Truman will succeed upon the concert stage. But her father must understand that if she is to remain free of the taint of gaining her chances via the White House influence, he must not resent the bricks and bats she will receive, if any. R. B. Since childhood I have had a feeling that no person should criticize anyone for anything, unless he can do the job better. I cannot criticize Miss Margaret Truman as I cannot sing as good as she, and I think she is a wonderful singer, and until I can sing better than she sings I will continue to enjoy her music.

If Mr. Hume's reportorial accuracy indicates an eight-ulcer man on a four-ulcer job, then Mr. Truman's reported communication to Mr. Hume indicates the Nation is cursed with a flyweight in a post that should be manned by a heavyweight. OLD-TIMER.

He has an ungoverned temper and an over-quick trigger-tongue, combined with a gutter vocabulary, which seem far removed from the best traditions of presidential dignity. But, in a very real sense these faults are evidences of his personal honesty. Tact and integrity in the same personality are very rare, indeed. At best, tact is a mild form of insincerity which is hard to find consistent with complete integrity.

As an admirer of Mr. Hume's judgments in matters musical, may I take the liberty of expressing disappointment in his critique of Miss Truman's concert? His purely musical criticism was essentially correct, though certain amenities of expression and nuances of taste might have rendered it an even more accurate assessment of Miss Truman's musical attainments and deficiencies.

But a large proportion of the full house which greeted her did not go to hear the singer. They went to see the President's daughter. Miss Truman, with her innate modesty and common sense, undoubtedly knows this as well as anyone. She has chosen to satisfy the public's curiosity on the high level of the concert stage (no easy task) rather than as a "play-girl," or a repetitive divorcee, or mannequin or "clothes-horse," or a social "wise-cracker," or just a plain nonentity. 'Acheson Must Go' Campaign

By Marquis Childs

Coalition Cabinet?

WITH A parliamentary government, the United States would have had a coalition cabinet within a few days after the Korean crisis. Much greater responsiveness to changing needs and demands is inherent in the parliamentary system, under which the executive and his cabinet members are also legislators elected by the people.

While it was of greater magnitude and the timing of events far swifter, there is an analogy in the fall of Norway and Hitler's sweeping campaign in Belgium, Holland and France in 1940. On May 10 of that year Winston Churchill, who led the Conservative opposition to Neville Chamberlain and his Munich policy, became Prime Minister. Leaders of the Labor Party were brought into a coalition cabinet which carried on throughout the war.

Sometimes it seems as though we were determined to prove the irresponsibility of our system of divided powers. At the moment Secretary of State Acheson was participating in the critical conferences with Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman, the "Acheson must go" chorus increased in volume.

Significantly in this case, the leader is Senator Irving M. Ives of New York. A Republican, Ives supported the bipartisan foreign policy. He voted for Acheson's confirmation.

IVES says politics has nothing to do with his resolution calling for Acheson's removal. The decision to press the resolution came (1) because he was convinced that Acheson no longer has the confidence of the country and (2) because the present Secretary cannot cooperate with Congress.

In this connection it is interesting to recall that Ives was one of the seven Senators who signed the statement last June drawn up by Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine condemning McCarthyism. This won him the disfavor of the conservative leadership of his party, and the cynical now believe he is working his passage back.

Anything like a real working coalition is difficult or impossible under our Constitution, which rigidly compartmentalizes the functions of government. If a President calls in the opposition, he seems to surrender authority fixed in fundamental law.

But many are now saying the time has come for President Truman to make the effort. No matter how the Korean affair is ended, the months ahead will be full of strain and trial. The President could turn to men in both parties and put on them some of the harsh responsibility for government. Thereby he would strengthen the Administration.

IF ACHESON is to go, several first-rate men are available. Among them: Paul G. Hoffman, former European aid administrator; John Foster Dulles, Republican adviser to Acheson; Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, a strong defender of the bipartisan foreign policy and an advocate of much more rapid preparedness.

For Secretary of Agriculture: Allan Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Senator Richard Russell of Georgia; Senator George Aiken of Vermont. These men oppose in one degree or another the so-called Brannan farm plan. But in the crisis of the next two to five years this is irrelevant, since production will be the only goal.

For Secretary of the Treasury: Marion B. Folsom, chairman of the Committee for Economic Development and treasurer of Eastman Kodak; Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia; Beardsley Ruml, former chairman of Macy's in New York and also with the Committee for Economic Development.

For Secretary of Labor: Cyrus Ching, who has demonstrated his skill as labor mediator and administrator; Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon; Senator Ives.

This list could be multiplied many times over. And as for the President's frequent complaint that he gets turned down when he calls on men to serve, surely in view of what is happening now no one would dare to say no. Young men are being drafted every day to fight and die.

But it is very obvious that such changes will not take place. One reason is the temperament of the President. And another reason is Mr. Truman's conviction, for which considerable evidence can be presented, that under the Constitution coalition government is not practical.

Since this is so, it seems to me dangerously irresponsible to go on with the sniping against individuals. It merely weakens the Nation at a time when we are in desperate need of all the strength we can muster as Americans and not as Democrats or Republicans.

Transit Service

Since the new management of the Capital Transit Co. took over, it seems as if both dividends and stock values have increased about 50 percent. In the same period, fares have become among the highest in the Nation and service among the worst! In the evening rush hour, one can wait at the Wisconsin and Massachusetts ave. platform 15 to 20 minutes for a streetcar and only rarely will the streetcar operator hold up his car long enough so that the people alighting from a connecting bus can get on. As if in league with the idea of making people wait and stand in the rain on an unprotected platform, the N-3 bus will not let people off at this intersection.

What can the public do about it?

It Was Tough

What the First Marine Division has just proved, in its grueling march from Koto toward the sea, is that heroism is born anew every generation. The conditions the Marines had to face in their 50-mile retreat—an enemy in well-nigh overwhelming strength plus the 25-below-zero Korean winter—were tough beyond description. But the Marines, and their colleagues of the Seventh Army Division along with a contingent of British commandos, were tougher. Few Americans who were not there can understand fully what their fighting men went through, but most persons will appreciate the nature of the sacrifice from the comment that it was worse than Tarawa.

Tarawa was, of course, a totally different type of operation not comparable to the breakout from the trap in northeast Korea. In the present instance the task of the Marines and the Seventh Division elements was to save themselves as fighting units—to force their way through the encirclement and push a narrow corridor across mountains and chasms to the coastal city of Hungnam so that they and their equipment could be evacuated by sea. This they have done despite a 30 percent casualty rate at the hands of the enemy and the weather. One regimental combat team which had fought to the Manchurian border is still in considerable danger, but the remainder of the imperiled Tenth Corps now seems to be safe. This is an immense accomplishment reflecting not only great courage but also leadership of a high order both among the Marines and in the units facilitating the escape.

While a feeling of relief certainly is warranted, excessive optimism is not. General MacArthur's statement that "the command for the time being is relatively secure" is confident but cautious. Meanwhile, reports persist that plans are being laid for a general evacuation from Korea. The MacArthur assertion does not preclude this. It means merely that the United Nations forces are for the most part intact and the retreat has been orderly. The answer to how secure they are depends, however, on the intentions of the Chinese, for the U. N. armies cannot be expected to do much more than delay the Chinese masses if they are determined to drive all the way down the peninsula. The one encouraging point is that the disaster phase has been passed and that rescue of the U. N. forces is now possible if that should prove necessary.

Essential Trimming

Elmer B. Staats, assistant director of the Federal Budget Bureau, recently forecast that the presidential budget message will recommend elimination of all Federal grants to housing authorities for any purpose except the purchase of sites. Half of the 150 million dollars appropriated for hospital construction, he said, has been placed in reserve and will not be available. These cutbacks are necessary not only because the Federal Government is faced with huge military expenditures, but also because the construction of new housing and hospitals increases demands for scarce materials and labor. Since our productive resources are limited, the needs of national defense are a compelling reason for deferring work on slum clearance and nonessential housing projects.

For the same reason drastic reductions in public works expenditures are essential. To be sure, primary highways are as essential to national security as steel mills, but many road projects contribute nothing to national defense. That is also true of many reclamation and electrification projects that help to swell the Government's budgeted expenses.

Substantial cuts can be made in other spending activities. The cost of CCC price-support operations, for instance, has been greatly reduced owing to the rise of farm prices and actual shortages of many basic farm products. Sharp reductions in the economic foreign-aid program are in order in view of the progress made by ECA countries and the introduction of military aid. Federal educational and relief grants can also be trimmed, since booming business insures full employment and enables State and local governments to extract more revenue from the income stream. Regional shifts of population resulting from expansion of defense industries will relieve school and housing shortages in some places and increase them elsewhere. Federal aid on a selective basis may be the solution of this problem.

As the Committee for Economic Development warns, "many expenditures of the Federal Government that are classified as 'nonmilitary' are essential to the national security; they cannot be reduced and may even have to be expanded. The situation does not call for indiscriminate slashes, in Government or elsewhere." Nevertheless, it is quite evident that a good many billions of dollars can be saved by eliminating, reducing or postponing contemplated outlays without inflicting undue hardship on the civilian population. The sacrifices entailed will be compensated for by a shrinkage of Federal deficits, reduced pressure on prices, and a speedup of defense production that would otherwise be impeded by civilian competition for manpower and strategic materials.

National Emergency

President Truman's bipartisan conference on Wednesday to discuss the proclaiming of a national emergency is to be applauded even if it has no other purpose than to alert the American people to the danger confronting them. Business as usual, price and wage increases as usual, pleasure as usual and politics as usual are still being pursued on a wide scale. There is a strong disposition to clutch at every flimsy thread of rumor that a peace settlement may be in the offing as an excuse for postponing the day when we buckle down to the gigantic task of preparing ourselves for either war or an uneasy armed peace. In a world where aggression is rampant it is a perilous business to let our hopes so far outrun our preparation to deal with grim realities.

Many will recall that President Roosevelt declared an unlimited national emergency more than six months before Pearl Harbor. It came at a time when Hitlerism was sweeping over Europe and Africa and daily becoming a greater menace to our own national security. But American troops were not yet engaged in the fighting and we had taken upon ourselves only the commitment of acting as the "arsenal of democracy." Today most of our effective troops are in peril in faraway Korea, and we have an enormous commitment to join in the defense of western Europe. The need for proclamation of a national emergency is even greater today than it was in 1941.

Incidentally, the national emergency proclaimed 9½ years ago is still in effect. But it has no significance in relation to the present situation. The new emergency demands recognition on its own account. No doubt the effect will be to bring into play minor executive powers not now being exercised, but for the most part it is not a question of powers. Congress gave the President all the authority he needs in the sweeping Defense Production Act of last September. The most pressing requirement at present is specific rearmament goals and adjustment of our national economy for prompt achievement of those goals. In our opinion, there should no longer be any hesitation in acquiring the machine tools, plants, and trained personnel for full-scale wartime production under the pressure that a state of national emergency will give. Freedom cannot be defended on a shoestring against the vast armies that Moscow is able to put into motion in the cause of aggression.

Industrial mobilization on such a scale will certainly hasten the imposition of tighter controls over strategic materials and the application of wage and price controls as soon as is feasible. We think the people are ready for this. Public opinion seems to be demanding that the Administration move much faster than it has done in preparing for the worst, and that will necessarily mean tighter controls to avert chaos and frustration. Harder work and temporary restraints upon free enterprise will be small prices to pay for the avoidance of another Pearl Harbor—or another Korea.

An emergency proclamation will not necessarily be a prelude to general war. On the contrary, it is the weakness of the free world that encourages aggression, and the strength we hope to acquire may avert the threatened attacks. Apparently this lesson has to be learned again and again. That fact is a testimonial to the profound American desire for peace, but, given the kind of world we live in, our delay in industrial mobilization reflects a dangerous shrinking from realities. A shift to more rigorous measures of self-denial and national effort cannot be too quickly effected.

Criminal Getaway

Add to the company of Senators who are impeding the work of the Kefauver Crime Committee the name of the senior Senator from Nevada, Pat McCarran. Last Monday Senator Kefauver introduced a resolution calling for the Senate to authorize arrest warrants for 11 key witnesses who had evaded the service of subpenas. Majority Leader Lucas, for reasons of his own, put off a vote and referred the question to the Judiciary Committee, which was requested to report on Friday. On Wednesday, however, Senator McCarran, the committee chairman, appeared on the floor with a motion to delay the report of the committee until December 18. The motion was passed by a handful of votes while Senator Kefauver was presiding over a committee hearing elsewhere.

What then ensued on a motion by Senator Lucas to reconsider the delay, and an immediate motion by Mr. McCarran to table the motion to reconsider, is best told by excerpts from the Congressional Record:

Mr. Wherry. Mr. President, I voted in favor of the motion of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. At the time there were only five or six Senators on the floor. I do not wish to ask for a quorum call at this late hour, but I think that in all fairness if some Senators do not agree with the action taken because so few members of the Senate were present, they should have an opportunity to file a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to . . .

Mr. McCarran. If ample time were available, I believe the Senator from Nebraska would be justified in taking the position which he now takes. However, it is only a question of asking for more time.

Mr. Wherry. . . . We are confronted with a motion which will practically bar further consideration of the resolution of the Senator from Tennessee. I hope the Senator will withdraw his motion.

Mr. McCarran. I will withdraw my motion if the Senator from Illinois will withdraw his motion.

Mr. Lucas. If the Senator from Nebraska withdraws his motion, of course, I shall also withdraw my motion.

The upshot of this clubby little exercise in democracy as practiced in the Senate is that the racketeers among the 11 witnesses have just that much more time to hide. Most interesting of all is Senator McCarran's dual standard of time. How does it happen that time is so urgent a matter to him when pressing a motion for delay behind Senator Kefauver's back, and so leisurely an affair when it comes to a stiff measure to crack down on racketeers?

Truce To Partisanship

Republican leaders in Congress appear to be assuming a more responsible attitude toward the world crisis. While many of them continue to feel that Secretary Acheson should resign, they are coming to acknowledge that a partisan demand for his scalp at this time would be a devastating blow to free world unity. Senator Ives' statement that he certainly does not want to force any action that would occasion disunity sounds like a prelude to amendment of his resolution so as to eliminate any call upon Mr. Acheson to resign. We hope that he will do so and that the Republican leadership in Congress will acquiesce, for the situation in the Far East is too perilous to permit partisan squabbling at home.

Governor Dewey's implied rebuke to those members of his party who have been inclined to play politics with the Korean disaster has doubtless had a constructive influence. As Mr. Dewey says, the fate of the world depends on the "decisions that are made and the skill and speed with which we belatedly mobilize our own strength and find out who are our friends are in the world." Political bickering creates distrust of our stability of purpose and hampers Government efforts to reach decisions that will further our aim of combating aggression. Already our prestige is at low ebb and other free nations are showing an increasing unwillingness to follow our leadership. To restore their waning confidence it is imperative to present a united front to the world and abjure the partisan sniping that alienates our friends and gives aid and comfort to our enemies.

Discussion and criticism of policies still in the formative stage are not precluded by Governor Dewey's appeal for unity. Once decisions have been reached, however, the backward-looking critics who attack the Administration for past errors and the critics whose disaffection stems from mere partisanship are unwitting allies of those who would destroy us.

Income Levels

Family income levels for 1949, on which the Census Bureau will soon release a study, are expected to show continuance of the progress toward better family living. In the recent Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth there was concern over so many of the Nation's children being in lower income families. But the fact remains that American children now have the best living level in their history and the best in the world.

Moreover, the concentration of children in low-income families is not as pronounced as we had thought, and as we said on this page recently—taking our figures from an erroneous official statement. A little less than half—not 75 percent—of the children in America are to be found in families whose income is $3000 or less. Since farmers have by far the largest families, a high percentage of these children of low-income parents are in rural areas where families raise some of their own food. This compensates in part for lower cash income.

High employment and general prosperity have accompanied and been partly responsible for the high birth rate of the 1940's. Between 1944 and 1948 the median family income increased from $2500 to $3200, and the proportion of families making $5000 and over increased from 12 to 21 percent. All this is helping to give American children a better start in life. Even in low-income families nutrition is reported improved and community services, such as school lunches, aid for dependent children and unemployment insurance, have helped the poorer child's lot. Yet a great deal remains to be done for the many children on the ragged edge of better living. The White House Conference recommended that specific efforts be made to bring lower income groups to a higher income level and to increase their real income by providing more community services.

FALL OF THE YEAR

When tall oats part before the breasts of horses,
how to the reaper,
the heart enters a place of rest.

Is it harvest against winter,
when grain falls under blade and sky
that makes the heart rise as to a friend?

Is it the bright hair of children bending over sheaves
and voices small in sunlight?
They are strangers; it is not you they call.

Is it the fall of the year, earth changing
under thunder of hoofs,
leaving the sheared stalk? Once it was these

that moved the heart. But now you stand
as on an island, knowing the memory,
the dream of peace.

Strength In The Air

Allow me to commend Mr. Livingston Hartley upon his grasp of a new concept of warfare in his letter of December 3. The public, and indeed military personnel, should give more thought to the kind of warfare that Mr. Hartley envisions and less to the old methods of land warfare. As Mr. Hartley implies, this kind of warfare is practically the only method we can apply against the Communists in China with assurance of success. And it is also applicable against any other potential enemy. To assure success in any war now, air superiority must be obtained.

We ask nothing and we receive nothing by our land occupation of a conquered country. On the other hand, we spend billions in treasure and undergo untold suffering and hardship by our occupation of conquered territory just for the purpose of rehabilitating our former foes! This in itself is absurd.

Phase one of a future war is recognized to be the phase in which air superiority must be gained if the war is to be won. If phase one is lost, the war is as good as lost. No nation can live under an air umbrella of enemy planes. If a nation can be subjected to effective air attacks at the will of its enemy, it only remains for this enemy to make these attacks unbearable and he has won the war. We must make ourselves masters of air warfare in order to survive.

As mastery of the air is a prerequisite for our survival and we are unable to escape the necessity of building up huge air power it is only a matter of logic to expand this power to the point where it will meet our needs under any given situation.

Why should we use ground divisions, corps and armies when the fire power of comparable air units is vastly more devastating and the personnel involved not only vastly smaller but in keeping with our traditional supremacy in science and mechanics?

Chinese Nationalists

Mao Tze-tung, head of Communist China, admitted in his June 13, 1950, "state of the union" broadcast that there are 400,000 guerillas harassing the Chinese government, while the Chinese Nationalists of Formosa say their number far exceeds one million. As Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, former head of the Flying Tigers in China during World War II, said: "The United States hasn't got enough people to win a war in China. Our only chance is to arm the Chinese Nationalists and let them do the fighting."

A million of Chinese anti-Communist guerillas now existing in China, plus nearly 500,000 Chinese Nationalists on Formosa, can so disorganize and defeat Communist China that all its aggressiveness would evaporate, and the free world could breathe freely again. That the armies of Chiang Kai-shek on Formosa and the Chinese guerillas have what it takes to give the Chinese Communists a good fight, is proved by the fact that they already have had a foretaste of Communist misrule and slavery and now prefer cheerfully to undergo the privations and hardships of outlaws in the mountains of China, or rigorous training and frugal existence on Formosa, to becoming slaves in Communist China.

President Truman and Secretary Acheson tell us they want to localize the Korean war. They certainly accomplished that by permitting the crack Fourth Chinese Communist army numbering more than 200,000 men under Gen. Lin Piao which was stationed till June of this year in South China to guard against depredations and invasion by the Nationalist Chinese from Formosa, to be moved north first to Manchuria and then to Korea. The Communists could not have afforded to move this army to Korea if the Chinese Nationalists of Formosa had been permitted and encouraged to harass and invade South China, by our supplying them with arms and anti-Communist propaganda. That would not have localized the war but would have saved the lives of thousands of our boys in Korea, brought up our prestige and victory, and would have cost us perhaps only a few million dollars instead of billions in Korea.

Preventive War

Orchids to Maj. Gen. Orvil A. Anderson the man who stated that "waiting until you're hit first" is un-American and that he could wipe out Russia's five A-bomb nests in a week." Maybe he could do just that! Air Force General Vandenberg didn't like it so he ousted Anderson and ostracized him for his Air War College talks about "preventive war." Why, oh why, should a man with a good practical idea to save lives, money and time be suppressed?

Confidence In Acheson

Pose any question before the American people and there is a sizable stable of jackasses who rear up on their hind feet and bray out to the world what the American people think.

I'm a trifle weary of being told what I think by these self-appointed spokesmen. Currently a group is employing one of these fictitious "mandates from the people" in their efforts to perpetrate a vicious blackmail on the President and the country. As a means of satisfying their almost pathological desire for Secretary Acheson's scalp they are threatening the country and the President with noncooperation during this period of grave emergency unless the man is removed.

And, of course, not having the courage to state and stand on their real reasons, they are screaming that the American people have lost confidence in Mr. Acheson. Well, I haven't the authority to speak for all my fellow citizens, but here is at least one who hasn't lost confidence in the Secretary of State. In fact, he is one of an all too small number of public servants in whom I do have confidence.

And now where are the Democrats, and Republicans, in and out of Congress who should have the integrity and courage to brand this thing for what it is—a revolting and dangerous campaign of irresponsibility by a dreary band of ill-willed men?

Mr. Truman And Mr. Hume

When one enters the field of music and art, and goes before the public for their judgment, one of the expected results is the comments of the critics. Mr. Hume acknowledged that Miss Truman had grace, charm and courage. He said her voice was not so hot. That's been said before about better singers. Time will tell if Miss Truman will succeed upon the concert stage. But her father must understand that if she is to remain free of the taint of gaining her chances via the White House influence, he must not resent the bricks and bats she will receive, if any. R. B. Since childhood I have had a feeling that no person should criticize anyone for anything, unless he can do the job better. I cannot criticize Miss Margaret Truman as I cannot sing as good as she, and I think she is a wonderful singer, and until I can sing better than she sings I will continue to enjoy her music.

As an admirer of Mr. Hume's judgments in matters musical, may I take the liberty of expressing disappointment in his critique of Miss Truman's concert? His purely musical criticism was essentially correct, though certain amenities of expression and nuances of taste might have rendered it an even more accurate assessment of Miss Truman's musical attainments and deficiencies.

But a large proportion of the full house which greeted her did not go to hear the singer. They went to see the President's daughter. Miss Truman, with her innate modesty and common sense, undoubtedly knows this as well as anyone. She has chosen to satisfy the public's curiosity on the high level of the concert stage (no easy task) rather than as a "play-girl," or a repetitive divorcee, or mannequin or "clothes-horse," or a social "wise-cracker," or just a plain nonentity. 'Acheson Must Go' Campaign

By Marquis Childs

Coalition Cabinet?

WITH A parliamentary government, the United States would have had a coalition cabinet within a few days after the Korean crisis. Much greater responsiveness to changing needs and demands is inherent in the parliamentary system, under which the executive and his cabinet members are also legislators elected by the people.

While it was of greater magnitude and the timing of events far swifter, there is an analogy in the fall of Norway and Hitler's sweeping campaign in Belgium, Holland and France in 1940. On May 10 of that year Winston Churchill, who led the Conservative opposition to Neville Chamberlain and his Munich policy, became Prime Minister. Leaders of the Labor Party were brought into a coalition cabinet which carried on throughout the war.

Sometimes it seems as though we were determined to prove the irresponsibility of our system of divided powers. At the moment Secretary of State Acheson was participating in the critical conferences with Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman, the "Acheson must go" chorus increased in volume.

Significantly in this case, the leader is Senator Irving M. Ives of New York. A Republican, Ives supported the bipartisan foreign policy. He voted for Acheson's confirmation.

IVES says politics has nothing to do with his resolution calling for Acheson's removal. The decision to press the resolution came (1) because he was convinced that Acheson no longer has the confidence of the country and (2) because the present Secretary cannot cooperate with Congress.

In this connection it is interesting to recall that Ives was one of the seven Senators who signed the statement last June drawn up by Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine condemning McCarthyism. This won him the disfavor of the conservative leadership of his party, and the cynical now believe he is working his passage back.

Anything like a real working coalition is difficult or impossible under our Constitution, which rigidly compartmentalizes the functions of government. If a President calls in the opposition, he seems to surrender authority fixed in fundamental law.

But many are now saying the time has come for President Truman to make the effort. No matter how the Korean affair is ended, the months ahead will be full of strain and trial. The President could turn to men in both parties and put on them some of the harsh responsibility for government. Thereby he would strengthen the Administration.

IF ACHESON is to go, several first-rate men are available. Among them: Paul G. Hoffman, former European aid administrator; John Foster Dulles, Republican adviser to Acheson; Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, a strong defender of the bipartisan foreign policy and an advocate of much more rapid preparedness.

For Secretary of Agriculture: Allan Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; Senator Richard Russell of Georgia; Senator George Aiken of Vermont. These men oppose in one degree or another the so-called Brannan farm plan. But in the crisis of the next two to five years this is irrelevant, since production will be the only goal.

For Secretary of the Treasury: Marion B. Folsom, chairman of the Committee for Economic Development and treasurer of Eastman Kodak; Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia; Beardsley Ruml, former chairman of Macy's in New York and also with the Committee for Economic Development.

For Secretary of Labor: Cyrus Ching, who has demonstrated his skill as labor mediator and administrator; Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon; Senator Ives.

This list could be multiplied many times over. And as for the President's frequent complaint that he gets turned down when he calls on men to serve, surely in view of what is happening now no one would dare to say no. Young men are being drafted every day to fight and die.

But it is very obvious that such changes will not take place. One reason is the temperament of the President. And another reason is Mr. Truman's conviction, for which considerable evidence can be presented, that under the Constitution coalition government is not practical.

Since this is so, it seems to me dangerously irresponsible to go on with the sniping against individuals. It merely weakens the Nation at a time when we are in desperate need of all the strength we can muster as Americans and not as Democrats or Republicans.

Transit Service

Since the new management of the Capital Transit Co. took over, it seems as if both dividends and stock values have increased about 50 percent. In the same period, fares have become among the highest in the Nation and service among the worst! In the evening rush hour, one can wait at the Wisconsin and Massachusetts ave. platform 15 to 20 minutes for a streetcar and only rarely will the streetcar operator hold up his car long enough so that the people alighting from a connecting bus can get on. As if in league with the idea of making people wait and stand in the rain on an unprotected platform, the N-3 bus will not let people off at this intersection.

What can the public do about it?

Today and Tomorrow

Re-Examination In Germany

Lippmann

MORE than three months have passed since the meetings at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York at which Secretary Acheson took his stand for the rearmament of western Germany. This act of United States policy raised the question which is recognized throughout Europe as central and decisive for war and peace.

WHEN Mr. Acheson raised the question he had not consulted, much less had he reached an understanding with, the French. Nor did he know how the Germans would react. With nothing in hand except the idea that German troops ought to participate in the defense of the West, with nothing agreed to and nothing settled among any of the Western participants in the defense of western Europe, the new American policy was given world-wide publicity.

The results thus far have been (1) a sharp and long theoretical dispute about Germany between France and the United States; (2) a theoretical agreement, which neither government believes in, about Germany between France and the United States; (3) a German rejection of the theoretical agreement that France and the United States had decided to think they had reached about Germany.

ON THE other side of the Iron Curtain we provided all the openings that Soviet diplomacy could have desired. We had announced our decision to rearm Western Germany before we had an agreed plan for doing it or the armaments to do it with. This, if Mr. Acheson had had anything to punch with, could have been called telegraphing his punch.

The effect of telling about German rearmament when there were no arms and no plans about the arms was to alert the satellites, to frighten the Germans and to divide the French. Since nothing could come quickly out of it all except a dispute in the West, the Soviet government had plenty of time to exploit the favorable psychological situation we had created and to prepare its reply. There are extraordinarily competent diplomats in the Kremlin and they took care to coordinate their propaganda, their diplomacy, and the military position in the world. About the middle of October, secure in the knowledge that the Chinese would intervene in Korea and that the American Army would be pinned down in the Far East, they issued their warning that they would not "tolerate" German rearmament. They followed up the warning with the Prague proposals which, whether we choose to believe it or not, will make it still less likely that the disarmed Germans will unite behind any of the military proposals that we have thus far made to them or that we could in the near future make to them.

THOUGH we have suffered a diplomatic reverse, there is no need to regard the situation in Europe as hopeless. What has happened is that a great decision was made hurriedly last summer—and one might say absent-mindedly. The decision has miscarried. Whether this will lead to a resounding American political defeat, if not to the absolute catastrophe of a total war, will—so far as we can still direct the course of events—depend on whether we reexamine our German policy and revise it.

THE FIRST thing that a reexamination will show is that it was absurd to attempt to make a military ally of Germany before we had made peace with Germany. More concretely, it was vain to think that the French and the German infantry—the bulk of the ground forces of the proposed Western army—could be "integrated" or could fight loyally side by side unless France and Germany had first ended their historic quarrel and had become in law and in fact partners in Europe.

Awareness of this elementary and self-evident truth would have led us not to raise the question of German rearmament until the great enterprise of the Schuman Plan was consummated. For them the question of continental armies to defend the Continent would have been recognized as primarily a Franco-German problem to which only France and Germany can find a workable solution.

ANY SUCH approach would, of course, take time. But any genuine rearmament in continental Europe will also take time. When we re-examine the matter, must we not ask ourselves the radical question whether there is any reasonable chance that the Russians would allow us the time to rearm the Germans and to create an army which, if it were strong enough to defend western Europe, would of necessity be strong enough to carry the offensive at least into eastern Europe? Reduced to its elementary terms, can a disarmed nation with virtually disarmed nations behind it, rearm itself in open defiance of, and within a few miles of, the mightiest land power on earth?

If that incredible feat can be done, it can be done only because the deterrent power of the United States defends Germany and makes of it a privileged sanctuary. But then it follows that the defense of the Elbe is accomplished inside the United States; what goes on inside Germany in the way of rearmament may contribute not to the security of Europe but to its insecurity.

Thus an increase of the striking power of the United States and of those of its allies who are not within the orbit of the Russian infantry is—if that striking power is controlled by a wise diplomacy—deterrent. But some German infantry, called together defiantly and without regard for the political realities in Europe, would be provocative.

It would be only prudent, therefore, to suppose that at some point in the rearmament of the Germans—long before they are an effective military power again, the provocation in Germany would overbalance the deterrent power of the United States.

The World's Greatest Christmas Stories

The Errors of Santa Claus

This is the second of a two-week series of selections from "The World's Greatest Christmas Stories," a new anthology of Christmas masterpieces by many nations, edited by Eric Posselt.

Today's story, by Stephen B. Leacock (1869-1944), is from the book, "Wet Wit and Dry Humor." Leacock wrote as an avocation while head of the political economy department at McGill University in Toronto.

By Stephen Leacock

Fritz Kredel

"Edwin, of course, believes in Santa Clause absolutely. Say, look at this locomotive, would you? It has a spring coiled up inside the fire box"

IT WAS Christmas Eve. The Browns who lived in the adjoining house had been dining with the Joneses.

Brown and Jones were sitting over wine and walnuts at the table. The others had gone upstairs.

"What are you giving to your boy for Christmas?" asked Brown.

"A train," said Jones, "new kind of thing—automatic."

"Let's have a look at it," said Brown.

Jones fetched a parcel from the sideboard and began unwrapping it.

"Ingenious thing, isn't it?" he said, "goes on its own rails. Queer how kids love to play with trains, isn't it?"

"Yes," assented Brown, "how are the rails fixed?"

"Wait," I'll show you," said Jones, "just help me to shove these dinner things aside and roll back the cloth. There! See! You lay the rails like that and fasten them at the ends, so—"

"Oh, yes, I catch on, makes a good grade, doesn't it? Just the thing to amuse a child, isn't it? I got Willie a toy aeroplane."

"I know, they're great. I got Edwin one on his birthday. But I thought I'd get him a train this time. I told him Santa Claus was going to bring him something altogether new this time. Edwin, of course, believes in Santa Claus absolutely. Say, look at this locomotive, would you? It has a spring coiled up inside the fire box."

"Wind her up," said Brown with great interest, "so we can see her go."

"All right," said Jones, "just pile up two or three plates or something to lean the end of the rails on. There, notice the way it buzzes before it starts. Isn't that a great thing for a kid, eh?"

"Yes," said Brown, "and say! See this little string to pull the whistle. By Gad, it toots, eh? Just like real?"

"Now then, Brown," Jones went on, "You hitch on those cars and I'll start her. I'll be engineer, eh!"

HALF AN HOUR later, Brown and Jones were still playing trains on the dining room table.

But their wives upstairs hardly noticed their absence. They were too much interested.

"Oh, I think it's perfectly sweet," said Mrs. Brown, "just the loveliest doll I've seen in years. I must get one like it for Ulvina. Won't Clarisse be perfectly enchanted?"

"Yes," answered Mrs. Jones, "and then she'll have all the fun of arranging the dresses. Children love that so much. Look! There are three little dresses with the doll. Aren't they cute? All cut out and ready to stitch together."

"Oh, how perfectly lovely," exclaimed Mrs. Brown. "I think the mauve one would suit the doll best—don't you? — with such golden hair — only don't you think it would make it much nicer to turn back the collar, so, and to put a little band—so?"

"What a good idea!" said Mrs. Jones, "do let's try it. Just wait, I'll get a needle in a minute. I'll tell Clarisse that Santa Claus sewed it himself. The child believes in Santa Claus absolutely."

And half an hour later, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Brown were so busy stitching dolls' clothes that they could not hear the roaring of the little train up and down the dining table, and had no idea what the four children were doing.

NOR DID the children miss their mothers.

"Dandy, aren't they?" Edwin Jones was saying to little Willie Brown, as they sat in Edwin's bedroom. "A hundred in a box, with cork tips, and see, an amber mouthpiece that fits into a little case at the side. Good present for dad, eh?"

"Fine!" said Willie, appreciately, "I'm giving father cigars."

"I know. I thought of cigars, too. Men always like cigars and cigarettes. You can't go wrong on them. Say, would you like to try one or two of these cigarettes? We can take them from the bottom. You'll like them, they're Russian,—away ahead of Egyptian."

"Thanks," answered Willie. "I'd like one immensely. I only started smoking last spring—on my twelfth birthday. I think a feller's a fool to begin smoking cigarettes too soon, don't you? It stunts him. I waited till I was 12."

"Me, too," said Edwin, as they lighted their cigarettes. "In fact, I wouldn't buy them now if it weren't for Dad. I simply had to give him something from Santa Claus. He believes in Santa Claus absolutely, you know."

AND WHILE THIS was going on, Clarisse was showing little Ulvina the lovely little bridge set that she had got for her mother. "Aren't these markers perfectly charming?" said Ulvina, "and don't you love this little Dutch design—or is it Flemish, darling?"

"Dutch," said Clarisse. "Isn't it quaint? And aren't these the dearest little things—for putting the money in when you play. I needn't have got them with it—they'd have sold the rest separately—but I think it's too utterly slow playing without money, don't you?"

"Oh, abominable," shuddered Ulvina, "but your mamma never plays for money, does she?"

"Mamma! Oh, gracious, no. Mamma's far too slow for that. But I shall tell her that Santa Claus insisted on putting in the little money boxes."

"I suppose she believes in Santa Claus, just as my mamma does."

"Oh, absolutely," said Clarisse, and added, "What if we play a little game! With a double dummy, the French way or Norwegian Skat, if you like. That only needs two."

"All right," agreed Ulvina, and in a few minutes they were deep in a game of cards with a little pile of pocket money beside them.

ABOUT HALF AN HOUR later, all the members of the two families were down again in the drawing room. But of course nobody said anything about the presents. In any case they were all too busy looking at the beautiful big Bible, with maps in it, that the Jonses had brought to give to Grandfather. They all agreed that with the help of it, Grandfather could hunt up any place in Palestine in a moment, day or night.

But upstairs, away upstairs in a sitting room of his own, Grandfather Jones was looking with an affectionate eye at the presents that stood beside him. There was a beautiful whisky decanter, with silver filigree outside (and whisky inside) for Jones, and for the little boy a big nickel-plated jew's harp.

Later on, far in the night, the person, or the inuence, or whatever it is called Santa Claus, took all the presents and placed them in the people's stockings.

And, being blind as he always has been, he gave the wrong things to the wrong people—in fact, he gave them just as indicated above.

But the next day, in the course of Christmas morning, the situation straightened itself out, just as it always does.

Indeed, by 10 o'clock, Brown and Jones were playing with the train, and Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Jones were making dolls' clothes, and the boys were smoking cigarettes, and Clarisse and Ulvina were playing cards for their pocket money.

And upstairs — away up — Grandfather was drinking whisky and playing the jew's harp.

And so Christmas, just as it always does, turned out all right after all.

Senate Group Votes Inquiry In Red Law

By the United Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted unanimously yesterday for a $100,000 Senate inquiry into the administration of the new Communist-control bill and Red activities both in and out of Government.

If approved by the full Senate, the proposal almost certainly would lead to a revival of the investigation of the controversial Reds-in-Government charges leveled by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.).

Under its terms, the inquiry would be conducted either by the full Judiciary Committee or by a special subcommittee. The investigators would have broad powers rivaling those of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Pat McCarthy (D., Nev.) was hopeful the Senate Rules Committee would clear the way for early Senate action by approving the $100,000 budget on Wednesday.

Broad Inquiry Provided

In addition to the inquiry into the handling of the Red-control law, the proposal would authorize an investigation of the effectiveness of other espionage laws and a broad inquiry into subversive activities.

Some Administration critics have accused the Administration of administering the law too strictly in an effort to discredit it. The measure originally was passed over President Truman's veto.

As for McCarthy, Republican congressional leaders have been demanding a new investigation of his charges that the State Department is a haven for Communists and their sympathizers.

McCarthy's accusations were investigated last summer by a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee headed by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.).

Introduced by Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), the proposal for an inquiry was supported by three Republicans and three Democrats on the Judiciary group. The committee would be authorized to continue its inquiry until March 1, 1952.

Hits Mundt Bill Foes

The House Un-American Activities Committee in the meantime, officially branded the National Committee to defeat the Mundt bill as a propaganda arm of the Communist Party.

The group was organized as a lobby group in June 1948 to oppose the Mundt-Nixon Communist-control bill, later largely incorporated in the McCarran Act.

The House committee, in a report made public yesterday, said it agreed unanimously that the committee was organized "not as a legitimate enterprise, but rather as a propaganda adjunct of the Communist Party.

"The work of this organization, in many instances, was performed by the Communist Party, and it was at all times supported by the Communist Party," the legislator said.

3 More Witnesses Summoned To Hearing on Mrs. Rosenberg

By The Associated Press

The Senate Armed Services Committee last night subpenaed three more witnesses in its investigation of the fitness of Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg to be Assistant Secretary of Defense.

Acting Chairman Russell (D., Ga.) made the announcement after the committee spent three hours and 35 minutes behind closed doors listening to the testimony of Benjamin Freedman, retired New York businessman.

Russell identified the new witnesses as William Harris, reportedly a former FBI employe; Ted Kirkpatrick, a former FBI agent, and Isadore Schneider. Their home towns were not immediately available.

A fourth man, James Magraw of New York, whom Russell said the committee had planned to subpena, turned up voluntarily last night but did not testify.

Russell said that Schneider and Magraw were named by Ralph De Sola, a former Communist, as having been associated with him and as having knowledge of the information De Sola had given the committee about Mrs. Rosenberg.

Russell would not disclose Freeman's testimony or comment on it. But it was learned that the witness had acknowledged some errors in the written statements that he earlier had placed before the committee.

It was Freedman's statement that led the committee to call De Sola. The latter testified that he had seen Mrs. Rosenberg at meetings of the John Reed Club in New York, a Communist organization that existed i nthe 1930's.

Mrs. Rosenberg flatly denied the charge in a face-to-face meeting with De Sola before the committee last Friday.

The committee will have another session beginning at 9:30 a. m. today.

In advance of the night session, Senator Morse (R., Oreg.), a committee member, said the charges against Mrs. Rosenberg thus far "have not been supported by evidence." He added:

"Several aspects of the hearing have been very saddening because I'm satisfied that some anti-Semetic forces in America are taking advantage of this opportunity to smear Anna Rosenberg."

Mrs. Rosenberg's November 29 testimony provoked a two-hour argument in the committee earlier yesterday. It centered around the disclosure that Mrs. Rosenberg, Defense Department General Counsel Felix Larkin, and members of the committee had made changes in the sworn testimony before it was published last Friday.

Russell said the committee ordered the Rosenberg testimony reprinted in its original form, and that henceforth no changes are to be made in sworn testimony without committee approval.

Russell said it always has been committee procedure in the past to permit both witnesses and Senators to smooth out language in sworn testimony, and make other minor changes without changing meaning.

The changes that Mrs. Rosenberg and Larkin made were not disclosed, but one Senator said privately that some answers were qualified.

He said this occurred in instances where Mrs. Rosenberg had given a flat answer to a question and it later turned out her reply was based on second rather than first-hand knowledge.

19 Deplore Pressure on U. S. Leaders

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (U.P.)—Nineteen well-known Americans said tonight that the pressure upon President Truman to use the atom bomb in Korea is damaging the American cause.

They also deplored the use of political pressure against the President to oust Secretary of State Dean Acheson, declaring that a national emergency is no time for "punitive political expeditions or for singling out scapegoats."

"We believe damage is being done to the American cause in the world by the pressure upon the President to use the atomic bomb," the group said.

"It should be understood, first of all, that the atomic bomb is not a weapon adapted to all military situations. Korea is a prime example of a poor atomic bomb target. Moreover, any decision to use the bomb should take into account all the factors—military and moral both—bearing upon present and eventual American security. We are confident that all these factors will be taken into account by the President, who has the responsibility for any decision to use the bomb."

Of Books and Brentano's

"Don't give me something I need—give me something I want." We all have heard that popular theme at Christmas and it is easy to understand. Many a closet is full of pogo sticks and trick golf clubs because the master of the house would rather be surprised. There is a happy compromise for most of us though, especially here in Washington where newsmen, executives, politicos, administrators and such depend so heavily on that basic commodity known simply as information. There are dozens of new important reference books now at Brentano's just waiting to be wrapped as gifts that are both needed and wanted.

How many people do you know who could use "THE DIPLOMATIC YEAR BOOK" at twenty dollars? It's the diplomatic list of the world assembled by the editors of United Nations World Magazine, with each leading diplomatic name, address of offices, telephones, national holidays and other data plus authoritative articles and diplomacy in action and a glossary of diplomatic procedure.

Or, for fireside strategists as well as students and professional people what about WEBSTER'S GEOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY ($8.50)? It's a new quick reference source of geographical information covering all the world's important places, 40,000 names, including Bibical and World War II, all incorporated cities and towns on this continent. 177 maps and 126 useful tables make it just about the finest book of its kind ever published.

THE COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPAEDIA ($25.00) is the second edition of the superb one-volume work, now revised and enlarged to include important new postwar material. Over 65,000 articles in clear simple language and a complete bibliography adapted ideally for home, school or office. Browse through it at Brentano's and be convinced (maybe some one could be persuaded to give it to you).

Installment Thirty

(This is the thirtieth of 31 installments of the personal letters of Franklin D. Roosevelt, from the two-volumn work, "F.D.R.: His Personal Letters." The books were edited by Elliott Roosevelt.)

F.D.R. to Harry S. Truman in Kansas City (Telegram)

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Nov. 8, 1944

I am very happy that things have gone so well. My thanks and congratulations for your splendid campaign. I will see you very soon in Washington. Roosevelt

The telegram to Truman was sent the day after the election of Roosevelt to a fourth term.

F.D.R to James Roosevelt in San Diego:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Nov. 13, 1944

Dear Jimmy:

I take it you know I have been slightly busy these past weeks and did not have a chance to write and thank you for that delicious fruit you sent me from Palm Springs. Mother, Anna and all of us enjoyed it immensely.

I had a nice note from Admiral Davis who says that you are off on some special job at the present time. He seemed to be very pleased with the photograph which I sent to him.

I made a very hurried and hectic tour in the last few weeks—mostly in bad weather—but the results were worth it. The little man made me pretty mad.

I hope to get a little sleep and rest now that the campaign is out of the way.

Much love to you and Rommie, and I hope to see you both soon.

Affectionately,

The "hurried and hectic" tour referred to the windup of the 1944 campaign. F. D. R.'s characterization of Dewey in this letter as "the little man" reflected a great change in his evaluation of the New York governor.

F.D.R. to Jesse Jones in Washington:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Jan. 20, 1945

Dear Jesse:

This is a very difficult letter to write—first, because of our long friendship and splendid relations during all these years and also because of your splendid services to the Government and the excellent way in which you have carried out the many difficult tasks during these years.

Henry Wallace deserves almost any service which he believes he can satisfactorily perform. I told him this at the end of the campaign, in which he displayed the utmost devotion to our cause, traveling almost incessantly and working for the success of the ticket in a great many parts of the country. Though not on the ticket himself, he gave of his utmost toward the victory which ensued.

He has told me that he thought he could do the greatest amount of good in the Department of Commerce, for which he is fully suited, and I feel, therefore, that the Vice President should have this post in the new Administration.

It is for this reason only that I am asking you to relinquish this present post for Henry, and I want to tell you that it is in no way a lack of appreciation for all that you have done, and that I hope you will continue to be a part of the Government.

During the next few days I hope you will think about a new post—there are several Ambassadorships which are vacant—or about to be vacated. I make this suggestion among many other posts and I hope you will have a chance, if you think well of it, to speak to Ed Stettinius, who will not leave to join me for several days.

Finally, let me tell you that you have my full confidence and that I am very proud of all that you have done during these past years.

With my warm regards,
Always sincerely,

F.D.R. had told Wallace on August 29th that he could have any Cabinet post he wished except the State Department. Wallace chose the Department of Commerce, which was headed by his antagonist, Jesse Jones. In response to this letter, Jones rejected the offer of an ambassadorship, and coupled his refusal with an attack on the proposal to make Wallace Secretary of Commerce, based on Wallace's alleged inexperience in business and finance.

In Congress, Senator George introduced a bill to sever all lending agencies, such as the R. F. C., from the Department of Commerce. The controversy between Wallace and his supporters and Jones and his supporters raged vigorously while F.D.R. was at Yalta. It became clear that the confirmation of Wallace would be impossible without agreeing to a separation of the loan agencies from the Department of Commerce. This was done, and Wallace was then confirmed, 56 to 32.

F.D.R. to Elliott Roosevelt at A.P.O. 634, New York:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 3, 1945

Dear Bunny:

It is grand to be able to address you as Brigadier General!

I am enclosing a copy of a letter from Arthur Morris for your information. Will you be good enough to let him know whether the suggested arrangement is all right?

I shall have lots to tell you about my trip the next time I see you.

I am off to Hyde Park for a few days.

Mother joins me in sending much love.

Affectionately,

Elliott Roosevelt's promotion to brigadier general had been approved by F.D.R., although he was urged by some advisers to drop Elliott's name from the list because of the political attack that would automatically follow promotion. F.D.R. had refused, stating that Elliott, at this time commanding the 325th Reconnaissance Wing, had earned the promotion. Arthur Morris was an official of the New York Trust Company.

F.D.R. to John G. Winant in London:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
March 16, 1945

Dear Gil:

I most certainly was made happy by your gift of George Washington's cane. It is most interesting for its association, but it is also a remarkably well preserved piece of wood, considering its age.

That is a particularly nice letter of yours, and the cane is earmarked for my own personal things at Hyde Park and not for the Library.

It was grand to get that glimpse of you. I am counting on your coming over a little later in the spring.

Poland seems to be acting up again—or, more correctly, the Russian Foreign Office.

With my warm regards,
As ever yours,

Ambassador Winant presented F.D.R. with George Washington's walking stick, which Washington had given to Jerome Bonaparte. The uneasy reference to Poland in the last paragraph was provoked by Russian insistence, contrary to the understandings at Yalta, that the Lublin government, consisting of Communists, should represent Poland at San Francisco.

Dr. Eisenhower Sets 'Academic Freedom' Policy

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Dec. 11 (AP).—Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, president of the Pennsylvania State College, has announced a new "academic freedom" policy for faculty members regarding controversial subjects.

The policy is part of a new plan to become effective on July 1, 1952, which also institutes new teacher tenure and resignation regulations.

Dr. Eisenhower pointed out that a teacher, in teaching on controversial matters, may "set forth justly, without suppression or innuendo, the divergent opinions of other investigators."

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

New Housing Curbs Flexible, Foley Stresses

By S. Oliver Goodman

The new Federal housing regulations are flexible, Raymond M. Foley emphasized yesterday.

Foley

Foley, Housing and Home Finance Administrator, pointed out that under the restrictions of last July 19 and the more recent Regulation X, the goal for housing starts in 1951 has been set at 850,000. The total of 1950 has been estimated at more than 1,300,000.

Foley told the midyear meeting yesterday of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks in New York that if housing production remained "unsafely large," the credit restrictions would be tightened.

If it falls too short, he added, the regulations will be liberalized. And, if the program is distorted so that it does not furnish housing proportionately in the area of greatest need, it will be adjusted.

Nearly one-half of the expected private housing starts in 1951, he said, will be free of all Government credit curbs because of prior financial commitments.

A. Livingston Kelley, president of the association, told the bankers the national economy probably would suffer a "temporary set-back" as a result of the regulations on housing and other credit.

"The results of the enforcement of regulations W and X were quick and severe," he said. "That is obvious because there have been many complaints. But the purpose was to slow building and to tighten consumer credit. The medicine was just what was needed. The patient is now feeling low but his recovery is certain."

FORECAST: Three Washington business leaders will participate today in a panel discussion on "What's Ahead for Business in Washington for 1951." They are Ralph L. Goldsmith, vice president and general manager of Lansburgh & Bro.; Charles B. Dulcan, sr., executive vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co., and John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank. Moderator will be J. A. Livingston, business columnist for The Washington Post. The discussion will take place at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington in the Statler Hotel.

Reynolds Spring Shows Sharp Rise in Income

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP).—The Reynolds Spring Co. today reported net income of $716,365 or $2.45 a share for the fiscal year ended September 30 compared with $385,140 or $1.32 a share the previous year.

Sales totalled $14,759,568 against $11,417,548 the preceding year.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP)—Cotton futures turned irregular in nervous dealings today, with the threat of price controls stimulating persistent liquidation.

Losses at one time extended to more than $2 a bale, but a fairly good rally developed in late dealings when traders covered contracts and found offerings limited. Final prices were 75 cents a bale lower to 60 cents higher.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Dec. 11 (AP).—Wheat and corn came up with impressive rallies in the last 30 minutes of dealings on the Board of Trade today.

Both cereals ended on gains after having sold 1 to 2 cents lower than Saturday's close most of the day. This sudden show of strength created buying in other grains, but they got back only to around previous closing levels.

Wheat finished ⅞-1¾ higher, corn ⅛-1⅛ higher, oats ½ lower to ⅛ higher, rye unchanged to ½ higher, soybeans 1 cent lower to ½ higher and lard 8 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

The late buying movement was started in March wheat by a leading commission house which has been bullish on this particular contract for some time. March was any specific news on which to pin this buying it remained obscure.

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their pocketbooks

There's been a lot of talk in recent weeks about "the buying power of the dollar"—past, present and future.

We can't foretell the future—but we can tell you this right now:

You'll look a long way before you'll find a car that offers as much for the money as you can get in a 1950 Buick.

Close to half a million of these cars have been built and sold this year.

Close to half a million people have checked their features and prices against the field—and decided they'd better buy Buick.

As to prices—they start down below some sixes. And whether you price the SPECIAL, the SUPER or the ROADMASTER, you'll find, on a cents-per-pound basis, that few other cars can touch them for value.

And this is for sure! When it comes to performance—ride—the way they handle and hold the road—and thrifty use of fuel and oil—Buicks have never been finer.

That's another way of saying that coil springs on all four wheels—Dynaflow*—torque-tube drive—and Buick's high-compression, high-economy Fireball power produce an out-of-this-world combination.

So if you want your dollars to do extra duty—the time to act is now.

Look at the price tags—look at the features—sample the power and thrill that you get for your money—and you'll know what we mean.

*Dynaflow Drive is standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

'The Consul,' at Gayety, Is Stark and Stirring

"THE CONSUL." Chandler Cowles and Efrem Zimbalist jr. present Gian-Carlo Menotti's music drama in three acts. Settings by Horace Armistead. Lighting by Jean Rosenthal. Costumes by Grace Houston. Dream sequences by John Butler. Production coordination by Bill Butler. Entire production staged by Mr. Menotti. At the Gayety Theater. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

THE CAST

John Sorel ..... Russell George	The Secretary ..... Rosemary Kuhlman
Magda Sorel ..... Patricia Neway	Mr. Kofner ..... David Aiken
Magda Sorel (Saturday Matinee and Evening) ..... Bruni Falcon	The Foreign Woman ..... Marie Marlo
The Mother ..... Marie Powers	Anna Gomez ..... Marie Andreassi
Chief Police Agent ..... Leon Lishner	Vera Baronell ..... Elinor Warren
First Police Agent ..... Roger Schmidt	Nita Magadoff ..... Norman Kelley
Second Police Agent ... Charles Danford	Assan ..... Francis Monachino
	Voice on the Record ..... Mabel Mercer

By Richard Coe

"THE CONSUL" puts into human terms the heartsore of our sorry present. Of necessity, then, it is stark, but I am certain that the Gayety stage has never seen anything so stirring as the magnificent second act finale, which Patricia Neway performs with eloquent mastery.

So entwined is the music with the drama of this prize-winning work by Gian-Carlo that it is almost pointless to discuss the one without the other. It triumps where last fall's "The Barrier" collapsed.

This is a story not of freedom, but of the lack of it and how it is robbed by the greed of some men and the fuzzy red tape of others. It is broadly written and the music, as Mr. Hume tells you in the adjoining column, fits its creator's words.

Magda Sorel's husband bursts into their shoddy room with the secret police of a European state at his heels. His wife and mother (the splendid Marie Powers) watch over his baby while police hunt this man who presumes to differ with the state. When he flees, he urges his family to follow him into the safety of a neighboring country.

Magda's efforts to get through the consular red tape into a free land lead her into a tragic line of other sufferers, of papers to be signed, of people to be seen, of others to be avoided. Her baby dies, the grandmother, too, and a last-ditch effort of the husband to relieve her only brings death to them both.

Grand Guignol Framework

Menotti has been most astute dramatically in constructing a story which might otherwise have but static appeal. He employs the vivid, melodramatic ways of the Grand Guignol, introducing doors that fly open, the crash of a window pane, apparitions of a nightmare and a final scene of a stove and suicide that suit his purpose but which are, at the same time, strangers to our comparatively bloodless theater of the present.

As a subtle dramatic counterpoint, he also gives us a magician whose efforts to beguile the consulate secretary create a fantastic dream world of the carefree. Norman Kelley's performance as the magician carries the idea off effectively.

After the splendor of his second act finale at the consulate when Magda's patience gives way under the strain, I think the dramatic scheme falters.

Surely the triumph of the performance is the remarkable Miss Neway. While this artist has had considerable operative experience, it remains a matter to marvel about that not until this demanding role came her way did her talents achieve their tremendous potential.

In short, "The Consul" is a passionate, stirring play something which does honor to the American theater. It will move you deeply and one hopes that Senator Pat McCarran and his colleagues will pay the Gayety a visit.

By Paul Hume

GREAT SINGING characterized the Washington opening of Gian-Carlo Menotti's musical drama, "The Consul."

It is astounding that in a cast of a dozen singers who must also be actors, there should be no poor singing; but on the contrary, a rare exhibition of unusually handsome voices.

The cast of Menotti's tragic study is headed by one new and one familiar name: Patricia Neway, and Marie Powers. Menotti has an understandable affection for the rare talents of Miss Powers.

His writing for her in "The Consul" may remind one of her great scenes in "The Medium." But this is a new role and Marie Powers gives her richest and best to the moving lines, with the fervor of a debutante and the polish of a singer with an established reputation.

At the opening of act two she was especially triumphant through all the sorrow she had to portray.

And if sorrow was the lot of Miss Powers, how does Miss Neway, so young, know where to find the depths of tragedy she must travel night after night in this murky score? Her voice becomes for her a servant, able and instant to do her bidding.

Few singers could manage the grueling role so regularly without signs of strain. For that matter, Miss Neway's is a triumph of voice over method. No matter—there have been great singers before her who made their mark the same way. The thing is to be able to make it.

Magda Sorel has music that moves from simplest Puccini-like melodies to jagged declamatory phrases of taxing demands. One scene at the close of act two, the one beginning, "To this have men come," asks everything of a singer. And Miss Neway rides through it with veteran art. She may become one of our great lyric singers.

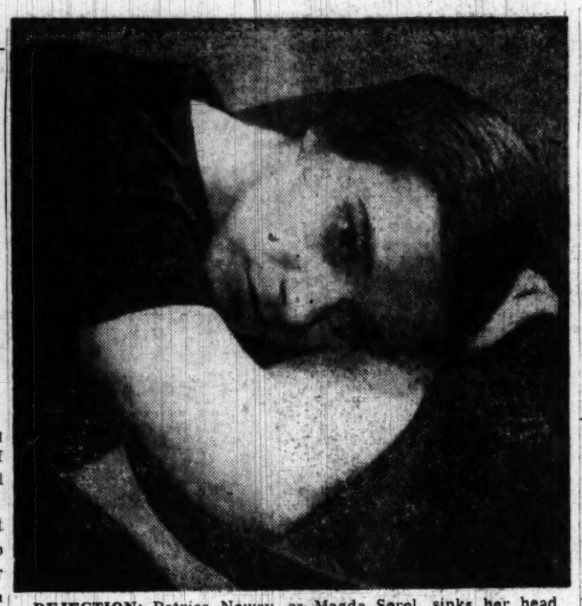
There are weak moments, as in the "Horizons" scenes in the final act; and repetitions of what was best in "The Medium." That is nothing new in the history of opera. Give Menotti time; he's showing his early strengths now.

The other singers in the cast were as notable as the leading ladies. Maria Marlo as the Italian women sang as beautifully as did Maria Andreassi in the role of Anna Gomez. Both were startling voices in their pure, dramatic inflections.

Rosemary Kuhlmann, the Secretary, started well and got better with every phrase. Right with the others were the excellent voices of Russell George and David Aiken.

George, as John Sorel, combines a magnificent voice with powerful acting. As for Norman Kelley, he is rare both as tenor and prestidigitator. How rare can one man be?

Leon Lishner, the menacing police agent, had the right voice for the brutality of his part. But again, it was an evening of great singing from everyone. It is a musical experience to be seen and heard by every lover of music drama.



DEJECTION: Patrica Neway, as Magda Sorel, sinks her head on the table during her failing efforts to escape a European police state in "The Consul," which opened last night at the Gayety. This young singer, relatively unknown, is giving one of the great performances of her day in Gian-Carlo Menotti's eloquent music drama

U. N. Unit Votes Probe of Missing War Prisoners

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—A United Nations unit today decided 43 to 5, with eight abstentions, to set up an inquiry commission to try to locate some 1,500,000 World War II prisoners of war reported still missing.

The United States has charged that the bulk of the POWs—mostly Germans and Japanese—are held in the Soviet Union as forced laborers. The Soviet Union charges that the West is using hundreds of thousands to build up military installations and to put down "popular liberation" movements in the Far East and Africa.

The commission, to be composed of three impartial persons chosen by the International Committee of the Red Cross, will begin to function after April 30, 1951, if by that date the major powers have not supplied the U. N. with complete data on prisoners not yet repatriated.

Early in the debate, Mrs. Edith Sampson, United States delegate on the U. N. Social and Humanitarian Committee, challenged Russia to let the U. N. find out which side is telling the truth. Russian Delegate A. A. Arutiunian insisted, however, that U. N. action constitutes an intrusion in the internal affairs of member countries.

Chandler Ousted in Surprise Move by Owners, He Fails on 3 Ballots to Get Contract Renewal

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 11.—Ever since Frank Lane, general manager of the White Sox, hollered "cop" and got Commissioner Chandler to call off the deal he made with the Yankees for Dick Wakefield last summer, relations between those two clubs have been strained.

Today they deteriorated into a snapping and biting feud. The Yankees are hopping mad at Lane for revealing the names of the five Yankee players who were offered in the futile bid for a White Sox Pitcher.

POVICH

After cleaning it up, it can be reported that one Yankee representative called Lane a "pop-off." He went on to declare, "the only way to talk business with Lane is to get him in a room and make a deal on the spot. If the deal falls through, you have to gag him."

The Yankees were doubly miffed at Lane—first because he chose to deal off two of his pitchers to the Red Sox, and secondly because he disclosed which Yankees were on the trading block. "If he doesn't want to make a trade with us, the least he can do is keep his mouth shut and not compromise us with our own players."

MR. JAMES DYKES, the new manager of the A's, thus far is standing pat with his eighth-place ball club. He was being tempted to trade his first baseman, Ferris Fain, either to the Yankees or Tigers, but is now cold to that proposition.

"There's a war on, you know," said Dykes in a statement that at first sounded somewhat irrelevant. And then he went on to explain.

"Sure we'd thought of trading Fain. We have a whale of a first baseman coming up from St. Paul. His name is Lou Limmer. Hits home runs, does everything and can't miss. But there's a war on, and Limmer is under the gun. He's 23. Get what I mean? I guess we're keeping Fain."

WHEN THE voluble Dykes was asked his view of the Red Sox-White Sox trade of yesterday, he stunned his listeners with a cryptic "no comment." But that didn't last long. He immediately plunged into an elaborate no-comment dissertation on the deal.

"It could help both clubs," he said. "Boston gets pitching strength in Scarborough and Wight. The White Sox will be helped by Al Zarilla in their outfield, and they get pitchers in Dobson and Littlefield. But Zarilla may not like it in Chicago.

"Out there the wind blows against all hitters four days out of five. You're never sure you've hit a home run until some bleacher fan comes around to get the ball autographed after the game.

"Ask Hank Greenberg what it's like to hit in Comiskey Park. He caught a fat pitch on the big end of his bat one day, and knew he had hit it well. Hank started giving it that old home run trot toward first base. When he neared second he looked up just in time to see the left fielder making the catch behind shortstop. That's the Comiskey Park wind for you."

Dykes took time out to listen to another manager's troubles with one of his hitters. "He's too tense up there at the plate. I keep telling him to relax mentally when he's up there with men on bases," was the complaint.

"That's exactly right," rejoined the cynical Dykes. "I always did say a fellow should go up to the plate and not give a good damn about what the situation is, and you'll pop up just the

THE DISCOVERY of a 100,000 error in arithmetic late today robbed the Athletics of the dubious distinction of having the greatest drop in attendance of any club in the American League in 1950. The A's drew 505,000 less than in 1949 but a recheck showed than Cleveland's loss was 100,000 more.

The major leagues' concern over the smaller crowds is understandable. The over-all drop in both leagues amounted to 13.12 percent. The only A. L. team to show an increase over the previous season was Detroit.

There was no consolation for the Nats' front-office contingent here. The figures showed that the Nats were the worst drawing card in the league on road games, proving less of an attraction than the A's, Browns and White Sox, who finished behind them.

EARLY WYNN, the former Nat who last season led the league's pitchers on the basis of earned run averages with a figure of 3.20, reaped his reward today by getting a hefty salary boost from the Cleveland Indians.

Emerging from his wage talks with General Manager Hank Greenberg, Wynn was smiling happily. Asked as to the outcome, he said: "You can say I just signed Greenberg for 1950."

'I'm Awfully Sorry . . .'

Griffith Is 'Deeply Shocked' Over Action on Chandler

Clark Griffith, 81-year-old Nats' president, said he was "deeply shocked" when told last night the major leagues had failed to renew Commissioner Happy Chandler's contract.

"I just don't believe it," Griffith said. "No . . . no . . . no . . . no," he repeated.

"Something must have gone wrong down there. I thought the commissioner was sure to be reelected. I'm awfully sorry. I've always been strongly in favor of him. I just don't understand the whole thing."

Griffith has been one of Chandler's stanchest backers. Last year when word spread that several owners were ready to unseat Chandler, Griffith said he would have no part of the thing.

"He's making us a good commissioner," he said at the time. "He's done a lot of good for baseball and has the unanimous support of the Washington Baseball Club."

Griffith and Chandler are old friends. Chandler was a frequent visitor to Griffith Stadium when he was a Senator from Kentucky and continued to make many visits to Washington to see his friend, Griffith, since being named Commissioner.

Czar Plans To Fill Term That Expires May 1, 1952

is my present intention, at this moment, to complete my term."

The sixteen owners, or top representaties of their clubs, were taking their action without knowledge of Chandler. They walked out of their respective league meetings into a joint hideaway session at a hotel removed from baseball headquarters, and were in session from 5:30 to 8:30 p. m.

Webb gave a detailed account of the balloting.

"We held a trial first ballot which produced nine votes for Chandler, seven against.

"The second ballot we put in official form, and it was eight to eight.

"When we first advised the Commissioner of our action, he requested that we take a third ballot. We did, and it reverted to the same 9 to 7 vote."

'War Scare' Story Hurt

Chandler's defeat is being directly attributed here to the baseball "war scare" story that was circulated last week in which the Commissioner was quoted as saying baseball might have to fold up if there was a spread of the war in Asia.

He declared he has been misquoted in what were off-the-cuff remarks to newsmen and went before the minor league club owners later the same day to assure them he believed baseball could continue through another war, as it did during the last.

However, the original war-scare story apparently crystallized what had been underground opposition toward Chandler. When the major league owners convened here it was taken for granted that he would be reelected.

Fred Saigh, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, was the leader of the anti-Chandler movement and apparently had been getting little support until the sudden, wholesale turn against Chandler.

The owners refused to reveal any break-down in the balloting by the clubs, but it was strongly reported that the Yankees led the American League opposition.

The Washington team, represented by vice president Calvin Griffith, cast a solid vote for Chandler on all ballots.

No Successor Discussed

Webb, representing the club owners, declared there had been no discussion of a successor to Chandler. "We will take up that matter in due time," he said.

Webb also said the possibility of buying Chandler out of office during the next 18 months, "has not been considered yet."

The owners' voting marked the first time in the history of baseball, since the commissioner-form of authority was set up in 1920 that a commissioner has failed of reelection.

Chandler was elected in May of 1945 to a seven-year term as the successor to the late Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis. At the time, he was the incumbent United States Senator from Kentucky, and resigned that office a few months later to take over the baseball job.

Only one year ago, in an apparent vote of confidence in Chandler, the owners raised his salary from $50,000 to $65,000 a year.

In the first year of his term there were rumors that the owners were discontented with their selecion and were in a mood to buy up Chandler's contract. He weathered that storm, if any, and apparently was in firm control of the game.

The first concrete intimation of his weakening control was noted within the past week when both the minor and major leagues defeated Chandler's wishes on one of his pet projects—tampering with schoolboy players before they had graduated.

Three years ago Chandler jammed through a ruling forbidding clubs to negotiate with schoolboy players until they graduated. This week the teams protested they were losing too many school athletes to football and other sports and overthrew the Chandler ruling by unanimous vote.

Vote on Coach?

Marshall May Throw Ball To People

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

GEORGE P. (for plebeian) Marshall, who seldom seeks advice on anything, yesterday said he may go to the people to find out if he should fire Herman Ball as coach of the Redskins.

"I am toying with the idea of sending a letter to our season ticket holders to see if they think I should replace Ball," the Redskins' president in charge of hiring and firing coaches declared.

Then, in a better change of direction than most of the Redskin backs showed this season, Marshall added:

"If I do send the letter to the ticket-holders, it doesn't necessarily mean that I'm planning to replace Ball, but If I do I want him in an executive capacity in our organization."

Turk Edwards, whom Marshall fired as coach of the Redskins in 1948 without asking the season ticket-holders, was also employed in an executive capacity the following season. Now however, he is not with the Redskins in any capacity. He lives in Seattle, Wash.

"Redskin fans have been extremely loyal during five losing seasons and maybe they have a voice in who should coach the team," Marshall continued. "Very frankly, I haven't decided one way or the other yet. I haven't talked to Herman about next year at all."

When it was suggested that Mr. Ball may quit, Marshall said:

"There's nothing to prevent him from doing that, is there?"

Regardless of whether Ball is replaced before the league draft meeting in Chicago next month, he will represent the Redskins and do their drafting for them, Marshall said:

"Herman will be there even if we have a new coach by then," Marshall explained. "He and I are more competent to do the Redskins drafting than anyone else because we know what's wrong with the team and what we need."

"Coach" Marshall sized up the

Nats Trade Stewart For Mike McCormick

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 11.—Out of the welter of red-hot rumors and reports of major transactions in the making today came one concrete deal of a minor nature—a swap of aged outfielders by the Nats and White Sox.

Stewart

McCormick

To the Chicago club he Nats sent 34-year-ld Eddie Stewart, a 267 hitter last year, n exchange for Mike McCormick, much-traveled 32-year-old who hit .232 in 1950.

The charm that McCormick holds for Manager Bucky Harris s the fact that he is a husky right-handed hitter, a better fielder and thrower than Stewart, who may be used to greater advantage against left-handed pitching.

In joining Washington, McCormick will be wearing his sixth different major league uniform. Formerly he was with four clubs in the National League before the White Sox brought him back from Oakland of the Coast League last season. As long ago as

American U. Loses, 66-63, To Penn State

Penn State last night taught the American Eagles a lesson in the zone defense and successfully staved off a rally by the Eagles to win, 66-63, in the Ward Circle gym.

The effective press and sliding zone defense used by the Nittany Lions held the high scoring Eagles to a mere 11 points in the third quarter, while sharpshooters Ted Panoplos and Captain Lou Lamie poured in 24 points.

In the last minute, Sherwood Webster made a layup to bring the score to 64-62, Penn State, and the Lions attempted to freeze the ball. However, Art Morales drew two free throws on a foul, by Tom Shuptar, but missed the second to make the score 64-63, Penn State. In the rough play following, Frank Moore, of the Lions, drew two foul shots and made both.

Georgetown Takes 3d in Row, 87-62

EMMITSBURG, Md., Dec. 11—Georgetown overpowered a surprisingly scrappy Mount St. Mary's team here tonight, 87-62, for its third successive victory.

The Mounts, formally dedicating their new gym, were in front after 9 minutes, 17-16. Then Georgetown's tall sophs got moving and walked off with a 45-23 halftime edge.

Mount St. Mary's came within 12 points after intermission, 60-48, but the unbeaten Hoyas pulled away for another convincing triumph.

Hugh Beins, 6-foot-7 center, took over as high-scorer for the first time with eight field goals in 11 attempts and added three foul goals.

For MountSt. Mary's, Jack Gilday, Gene Janis and Ted Kachnowski provided the opening flurry and wound up in scoring in that order.

Trailing Beins were Bob Makatura and Bill Bolger with 15 points each and Denis Murphy with 11. Usually high-scoring Barry Sullivan tallied only seven points.

Supporters Pledge Fight To Keep Him In Office

By a Post Reporter

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 11.—A fight to keep Baseball Commissioner Chandler in office was pledged to him tonight by club owners friendly to the commissioner shortly after the major league club owners voted against renewing his contract.

He was pledged full support by Walter O. Briggs, jr., vice president of the Detroit Tigers who told him:

"Hang in there and we'll lick them yet."

Fred Saigh, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, was the ringleader in the successful move not to renew Chandler's seven-year contract which expires in 1952.

He has been in open voice opposition to Chandler for many months. Saigh said:

"I have felt all along this no cut and dried proposition. I believe we should all get together and elect the best man possible to the job."

One of the clubowners reliably reported to have cast an anti-Chandler vote, Horace Stoneham of the New York Giants, was recently quoted in the Sporting News as saying "I am a 100 percent Chandler man."

Chandler insisted he was not resigning, but would finish out his term.

"No, I would not interpret this vote as an invitation to retire."

The decision by the club owners followed a long range movement to unseat the commissioner who was elected to succeed the late K. M. Landis in 1945.

Chandler told the press: "I want to thank you fellows" and continued:

"And to thank the American people. I have done my best and there are no regrets. I've done my best with God's help."

Chandler said he had no plans for the future beyond completion of his term.

Here's the Breakdown On Chandler Balloting

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 11.—The breakdown, as learned by The Washington Post, on the balloting tonight by the major league clubowners who refused to elect Baseball Commissioner Chandler for another seven-year term:

For Chandler—American League, Washington, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland; National League, Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Chicago, Pittsburgh.

Against Chandler—American League, New York, St. Louis, Chicago; National League, St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Boston.

Terps Spring Upset Over Wm. & Mary

The University of Maryland's improved basketball squad scored a major upset of the young Southern Conference season at College Park last night with a 48-41 triumph over William and Mary.

The Indians, who lost only to St. John's of Brooklyn in three starts, trailed throughout the contest, victims of the Terps' close guarding.

Capt. Lee Brawley, 6-2 forward, led the Terps with 24 points on 9 field goals and 5 of 7 foul shots.

William and Mary was able to sink only three field goals during the first half, the first coming after 11 minutes had elapsed. Maryland led at that time, 11-6.

Brawley then went to work and

Fans May Decide Fate Of Ball

Redskins 1950 season, which ended Sunday with a 45-21 defeat by Cleveland, this way.

"We need defensive halfbacks and defensive ends. Offensively, we are all set, provided, of course, the armed services don't take any of our players from us."

Marshall said his chief criticism of Ball's coaching job this season, his first full year at the helm, was his failure to play Rookie George Thomas and Joe Bartos on defense more. The Redskins won 3, lost 9.

"We shouldn't have played fellows like Bill Dudley, Rob Goode and Harry Gilmer on defense at all—they're too good on offense," he said. "We didn't get beat on offense this year, we got licked because our pass defense was lousy.

"Those three, along with Charlie Justice, constitute the greatest offensive backfield in the league. None of them should play defense unless we're in a real jam. Spot defense plays, that's all."

Quarterback Gilmer was hurt on just such a situation last month against the Eagles. He was sent in on third down to protect against passes and received a shoulder separation on his first defensive play.

Returning to Ball, Marshall said:

"There is a lot of sentiment for Ball and yet there's a lot of sentiment against him. Many people have told me what we need is a name coach, that this fellow was never even a head coach at a college.

"It's a confusing situation and I'm working on a decision. I may not even send that letter to the season ticket holders."

Nats Get McCormick

1940 he was with the Reds, one of the three National League pennant winners with whom he played.

A reported factor in the Washington club's release of Stewart was his salary feud last spring with President Clark Griffith. Stewart, who held out successfully for a $16,000 contract after failing to hit .300 the year before, incurred Griffith's wrath.

Stewart played in 118 games for the Nats last season, almost half of them as a pinch-hitter, and was highly esteemed by Griffith Stadium fans for his hustle. Manager Bucky Harris, however, used him only as a fill-in.

Harris meanwhile was busy talking trades on other fronts while Vice President Calvin Griffith was engaged in official league affairs at the clubowners meeting. The chief conversations concerned the Boston Red Sox.

The hottest report early in the day was that the Red Sox were out to procure either Lou Brissie of the A's or Sid Hudson of the Nats. The A's declared flatly they would not deal for Brissie, and the Nats were holding out for no less than Infielder Johnny Pesky in any deal for Hudson.

If the Red Sox refused to give up Pesky, Harris declared he would accept Vernon Stephens, but not at the cost of Hudson. Later in the day, the trade talk with the Red Sox deteriorated into a proposition involving a swap of catchers, Rookie Hal Keller for Matt Batts of the Red Sox.

Champ Plans Busy Tour This Winter

By Murray Rose

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP).—Ezzard Charles, who wants to be the busiest heavyweight champion of them all, will risk his crown for the sixth time on January 12 when he meets Lee Oma, the reformed playboy contender from Buffalo, in a 15-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

The International Boxing Club today closed the match. The champion will get 40 percent of the gate while Oma will receive 17½. Should the 34-year-old veteran challenger upset the titleholder, the two will engage in a return bout within 90 days.

This is only the first stop of a long winter tour for Charles—always providing he wins. If he gets by Oma, he may defend his crown in Detroit, Chicago and Miami. It was only six days ago that he knocked out Nick Barone in the eleventh round in Cincinnati.

The 29-year-old champion, as well as co-managers Jake Mintz and Tom Tannas, went Ez to better the record set by Joe Louis.

When he steps into the ring against Oma, it will be only a year and seven months since Charles won the championship by whipping Jersey Joe Walcott.

Of his five previous challengers, only Louis went the distance. Gus Lesnevich, Pat Valentino, Freddie Beshore and Barone all were stopped by the sharp-hitting Cincinnatian.

Oma has been banging at the gates of the champions for years. A clever, experienced fighter, he dimmed his chances by his penchant for the bright lights. His record is mediocre and yet he is rated one of the best in the business—when in shape.

A little more than a year ago he figured high in the running as a successor to Louis. Then he blew his opportunity by being knocked out in the fourth round by Bruce Woodcock in England.

His in-and-out record shows 62 wins, 25 losses and three draws in 11 years of boxing.

Majors' Attendance Drops Nearly 3 Million (14 Percent)

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—Major league baseball attendance last season dropped about 14 percent below the 1949 season.

Official American and National League figures released today disclosed a total attendance in the two leagues last season of 17,462,977. The 1949 turnstile figure was 20,215,365. This was a decrease of 2,752,388.

American League attendance last season was 9,142,361 compared with the 1949 fan total of 10,730,647. This was a drop of 1,588,286 or about 15 percent.

In the National, 1,164,102 fewer fans saw games last year than they did in 1949. The 1950 figure was 8,320,616; the 1949 total was 9,484,718. The drop was about 12 percent.

The Philadelphia Phillies showed up brightest in the 1950 major league season when 1,217,035 fans paid to see the Whiz Kids in action. This was an increase of 397,337.

Washington showed a drop of 71,048 in 1950. The Nats drew 770,745 fans in 1945 and only 699,697 last year.

Here are the 1950 attendance figures:

Washington's Dudley, Gilmer Named for Pro All-Star Game

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11 (AP).—Quarterback Otto Graham of the Cleveland Browns heads a brilliant array of backfield talent named today to represent the American Conference in the first annual National League all-star professional football game here January 14.

The backs were picked by the vote of the league coaches and sports editors of the Los Angeles metropolitan newspapers.

Graham, Jim Hardy of the Chicago Cardinals, Charlie Conerly of the New York Giants and Harry Gilmer of Washington were selected for the quarterbacking role.

Offensive halfbacks named are Joe Geri, Pittsburgh; Elmer Angsman, Cards; Gene Roberts, Giants; and Bill Dudley of Washington.

Defensive backs are Tony Adamle, Cleveland; Jerry Shipkey, Pittsburgh; Otto Schnellbacker, Giants, and Emlen Tunnell, Giants.

A. L. Permits 2 Extra Days For Playoffs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—The American League today voted to authorize two extra days after its regular season closes for playing off postponed games affecting the league pennant.

This unprecedented action followed years of taking a chance with the weatherman on the final days of the season.

Only games affecting the first place finish will be rescheduled in the extra days.

Earl Hilligan, league publicity director, explained the new rule this way:

"Suppose Boston finishes the regular season on the final Sunday, playing all its 154 games. Then suppose the New York Yankees finished a half game back, playing only 153 games. President Will Harridge will be authorized to set the site and date so the New York team would play 154."

The National League did not consider such action, but may take it up tomorrow.

The American League also ruled that any day game called on account of darkness would be finished under lights. Last year that rule applied only on the final series of the season between the two clubs.

In another action the player bonus rule was kicked off the books for good. The American and National Leagues followed last week's action of the minor leagues in voting to repeal the controversial regulation.

Both leagues also voted to eliminate the high school agreement. They agreed to an eightman committee of major and minor baseball men which would rewrite the rule.

The new regulation probably would permit clubs to negotiate with high school athletes but not actually sign them.

The 1951 All-Star game will be played in Detroit July 10. Both leagues gave the go-ahead to Detroit, which wants the game for its 250th anniversary celebration. The Philadelphia Phils passed its turn for the game in favor of Detroit.

Charles Town, Halted by Snow, Resumes Today

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 11. — Snow-blocked and slippery roads in areas leading to the track, forced the Charles Town Jockey Club to cancel today's racing program. President A. J. Boyle said the sport, scheduled to continue here through December 23, would be resummed tomorrow with Monday's entries being carried over.

Boyle said the thoroughbreds could have run. However, the hazardous condition of highways, particularly those leading from Maryland, led to the decision to delay racing.

Re ports tonight were to the effect that main roads have been cleared or sanded and that transportation was moving in a normal manner.

A. U. Frosh Bump Tech

McKinley Tech High School lost its first game of the season yesterday, 57-53, to the American University freshmen at Tech after leading until the final three minutes of the game.

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks:

Looks as if I put the jinx on this track with my piece about racing being called off here only once in December and then because of a bright sun and a thaw rather than a snowstorm. I wrote that column last Saturday, the most Spring-like day we've had since Thanksgiving Day. So what happens? The snow comes and the bangtails have to take a day off. Reminds me of the time, a dozen years ago, when I became angry with the then Bowie general manager and said, "I hope it snows, blows and closes the race track." He smiled because, at that moment, the temperature was in the 70s and a bright sun shone. The nert day, however, brought a blizzard, the track froze and the remainder of the meeting was canceled. However, I got caught in my own backwash. There was no anti-freeze in my care and it froze stiff as a board.—Bill.

Colonials Go Against Temple at Arena Tonight

Catholic, Quantico Also Play

George Woshington U. meets another topflight basketball opponent tonight at Uline Arena.

The Colonials, who picked on N. C. State in their opener, play Coach Josh Cody's always formidable Temple team. And the Philadelphians have Bill Mlkvy who almost matches State's Sam Ranzino as a point producer.

As a soph last year, the vowelless Mlkvy scored 300 points for a 16.3 average. His outstanding performance was a 39-point night against St. Joseph's in an intracity battle.

In other games tonight Catholic U. plays host to Bridgewater in a Mason-Dixon Conference test at Brookland. And Quantico Marines, one-point victor over C. U. last Saturday night, meet Washington and Lee at Brookland.

Mlkvy, from Palmerton, Pa., boasts a 27-point average so far this season, leading unbeaten Temple to easy victories over Delaware, Philadelphia Textile and Muhlenberg.

GW's initial effort against N. C. State, ranked one of the five top teams in the country, was anything but disappointing, despite a 86-71 loss. GW held a 41-39 halftime lead and wilted to superior manpower at the end.

Coach Bill Reinhart was satisfied with the excellent debuts of Sophs Tex Silverman and Bob Edenbaum. Silverman, 6-2 forward from Jersey City, racked up 17 points; Edenbaum, a 6-3 Brooklynite, had 14.

Adler and Gene Witkin, only Washingtonian on the squad, will start with the high-scoring trio.

1951 Slate No Snap

Navy 'Eases' Into 9 Tough Foes

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 11.—There's been a lot of talk about Navy lightening its football schedule, but it's hardly apparent in the 1951 slate released here today.

True, there are four Ivy League representatives—but, take a look at the four. The Middies open at Yale, and also face Princeton, Penn and Columbia.

Other stout opponents include Rice, Northwestern, Notre Dame, Maryland and, of course, Army.

The Princeton game will be the first in two years scheduled for Thompson Stadium with its 22,000-seat capacity. It's scheduled for October 6. Rice, Northwestern and Penn will be played away on successive weeks.

Baltimore will be the site of the next two attractive games—Notre Dame and Maryland. It's the twenty-fourth straight year for the Navy to meet the Irish.

The schedule load won't get any lighter until 1952—if then. Rice originally was down also for a game in 1952, but Capt. Howard Caldwell, athletic director, begged off. He previously convinced Ohio State to cancel a tentative home-and-home series.

If Navy treats many teams as roughly as it did Army, there's a chance they'll be the ones asking for cancellations.

The schedule:
Sept. 29—Yale at New Haven.
Oct. 6—Princeton at Annapolis; 13, Rice at Houston; 20, Northwestern at Evanston; 27, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.
Nov. 3—Notre Dame at Baltimore; 10, Maryland at Baltimore; 17, Columbia at New York.
Dec. 1—Army at Philadelphia.

In Poll

Princeton No. 1 Surprise

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (AP).—Princeton's single-wing Tigers, who brought new stature to Ivy League football by storming through to a perfect season, were the sport's major "surprise" of the 1950 campaign.

Sportswriters and broadcasters, voting in the Associated Press yearend poll, gave the Tigers a wide edge over the University of Miami (Fla.) and Lehigh, which also were high in favor.

Prnceton won nine games, most of them by top-heavy margins, reaching its peak in mideason with a 27-0 conquest of Cornell, the defending Ivy League champion.

Terps Upset W & M, 48-41

tallied 11 of the 13 points Maryland scored in the last nine minutes of the half, which ended with the Terps ahead 24-14.

Perry Lewis and Bill Chambers sparked a losers' spurt that brought them within four points, 45-41, with 1:40 left to play. The Terps then refused 7 foul shots, took the ball out of bounds, and stayed in command.

Fifty-two fouls were called in the rough contest, 30 on William and Mary and 22 on Maryland.

In the preliminary the Maryland Frosh overcame a 26-21 halftime deficit to doyn Loyola (Baltimore) Frosh, 60-45. Gene Shue was high for the Terp Yearlings with 19. Joe Lacy was tops for the visitors with 15.

'That's Why They Have Doctors'

Louis Says He'd Accept Ban—If He Couldn't Measure Up

BELL RIVER, Ont., Dec. 11 (AP).—In his usual, quiet manner, Joe Louis replied to John (Ox) Da Grosa who wants the former champion barred from further fights "in the best interests of boxing" and Louis himself.

"I wouldn't raise a fuss if any State barred me for failing to measure up to its rules and regulations and physical requirements," said Louis at his training camp. "That's what they've all got doctors for—to see if your all right.

"I plan to get back in condition and take on each opponent as he comes up. That's what I'm taking on (Freddie) Beshore for—to see if I can't get back to where I used to be as a fighter."

In New York, Marshall Miles, manager of Louis, and the International Boxing Club, in a statement by President James D. Norris, declared jointly that "Louis is fighting because he wants to fight. No pressure from any source has been exerted to force him back into the ring. He feels that the ring is his business and that is where he can make a living as he has in the past."

MDW Tourney Opens Tonight

Coley Wallace Wins Decision

Missouri mule's ear. He staggered up at the count of nine but was unable even to raise his hands to a fighting stance. Wallace tapped him with a few light lefts and let him ride out the round.

It might have been more merciful for Wallace to have given Spagnolo the coup de grace in the first. For the rest of the fight he stabbed Duilio with hard lefts and rights that turned his face into a bloody blob of raw meat.

It was Spognolo's third loss in 17 fights since he came to America from Italy a year ago. Only 675 spectators saw the fray.

In the final event of the evening, Johnny Pratt, former all-Army middleweight champion, gained revenge over Art Bethea by knocking out the District fighter in 53 seconds of the second round of a scheduled five-round bout. Bethea previously decisioned Pratt several weeks ago.

In four-round preliminaries, Welterweight Curtis Wade decisioned Billy Hickerson; Bobby Bowen won a split decision over Welterweight Kid Stone, and Jimmy Sewell fought Lightweight Paddy Bullock to a draw.

Yale's Had It

Yale has had four football teams that played an entire season without being scored upon — more than any other school.

Holdash, Hayes Added To North's Squad

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 11 (AP).—Center Irvin Holdash and Fullback Billy Hayes of North Carolina were added to Northern forces being built up for the January 6 Senior Bowl game here. Holdash was listed on the Associated Press All-America defensive team as a linebacker.

NPA Slated to Become An Independent Agency With Far Larger Staff

Commerce's National Production Authority is slated to be made an independent agency.

NPA was made a separate unit in Commerce on the theory that it would be possible to move it bodily out of the department if the crisis gets worse.

Once the President declares a national emergency, NPA will be on the verge of a big expansion in both personnel and activities. Independence for the agency will then be a matter of time. NPA is now hampered by the lack of office space and therefore it is hiring only a limited number of new employes.

LABOR: The President has been asked to issue an order to set up a Federal Safety Council in the Labor Department. Labor Secretary Tobin has recommended the order which would make the department responsible for the safety of Federal workers.

Senator Frank Carlson (R. Kan.) has been appointed to the Senate Post Office & Civil Service Committee to succeed former Senator Darby (R., Kan.) . . . Dr. Philip N. Powers of the Atomic Energy Commission has transferred to the manpower office of the National Security Resources Board. He'll help to develop plans to insure the Nation an adequate supply of scientists . . . Dr. David E. Public Health Services and an assistant Surgeon General of the Public Health Services anr an associate director of the National Institutes of Health . . . Patrick J. Fitzgibbons of the Army's Adjutant General's Office, is in the race for national vice president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes.

H&HFA: A defense housing program is being drafted by Housing & Home Finance Agency to provide homes for defense workers. One plan: to urge Congress to appropriate funds to H&HFA to be used to make grants and loans to local communities to provide defense homes.

Civil Service is accepting applications for information specialists to fill jobs of writers, editors, producers and broadcasters. The jobs pay from $3825 to $6400 to start. Many of them are in State's Voice of America. However, Civil Service will also use the lists to fill vacancies in other agencies. . . . All jobs on the staffs of milk market administrators have been exempted from Civil Service by the Civil Service Commission . . . A bill by Representative George Rhodes (D., Pa.) would require Uncle Sam to pay double time to postal employes who work on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION: Labor Secretary Tobin today will urge Congress to cover Federal workers under the unemployment compensation system. He'll testify before the Forand subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee. Besides Forand (D., R. I.), other subcommittee members are Representatives Mason (R., Ill.), Combs (D., Tex.) and Carroll (D., Colo.).

LONGER HOURS: Despite denials and silence by Federal officials on the subject, longer hours for many Federal workers, especially those in defense agencies, is being seriously debated.

In fact, a conference on an extension of working hours for many Federal workers was held yesterday. No definite decision was reached. However, everyone agreed that it was only a question of time before longer hours would be ordered.

The heads of two major agencies are reported to have ordered their staffs to begin to make plans for a longer work week.

I'm convinced of this—that employes don't want to give up their Saturdays unless it's absolutely necessary. Scores who have contacted me have proposed working longer days, shorter lunch periods—most anything in order to have Saturdays and Sundays off.

Furthermore, the employes don't want to put in longer hours unless there is work to do. They recall the early days of World War II when the Government went on a 6-day, 48-hour week overnight and many employes had nothing to do on those long Saturdays until their agencies could adjust their work schedules.

Two Killed As Bomber Crashes at Bolling Base

Capt. Ralph Lowe Returning From West Coast Flight With AF Sergeant

Two airmen were killed early yesterday when their B-26 bomber undershot a Bolling Air Force Base runway and crashed one third of a mile from the end of a 5000-mile round-trip flight to Portland, Oreg.

The only two occupants of the twin-engine Douglas Invader, they were identified as Capt. Ralph Z. Lowe, jr., 31, of Enid, Okla., and 1201 Valley ave. se., and S/Sergt. Eugene Carson Sapp, 30, of Moline, Ill., stationed at Bolling.

Approaching the field on schedule for a landing in a light snow, the plane nosedived into the ground on the Naval Research Laboratory reservation, about 1800 feet short of the Bolling north-south runway. It crashed and skidded into a corrugated tin supply building, which was damaged slightly.

Ceiling 2500 Feet

Air Force officials said the plane crashed at 3:20 a. m., when the ceiling was 2500 feet, visibility three miles with an overcast at 2800 feet and scattered clouds at 800 feet. It was flying at about 120 miles an hour.

Captain Lowe, briefing officer of the Flight Training Section at Bolling, had left the base Friday with Sergeant Sapp on a cross-country proficiency flight to Portland. They began the return trip at 6 p. m. Sunday, refueling en route at Omaha, Neb.

A Research Laboratory guard, Herman W. Bane, 361 Irvington st. se., said he was about 75 feet from the crash scene. "I heard a sputtering of engines and then a big thump," he said.

Two other guards said they saw the plane's wings "wobbling" just before the crash.

Gets Instructions

A spokesman said the pilot had communicated by radio with National Airport, which, in turn, transferred the contact to Bolling Air Base. Bolling provided landing instructions.

Lowe leaves his wife and a two-year-old son, Ralph Z. Lowe, III, of the Valley ave. address, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Z. Lowe, sr., of Fort Worth, Texas. Sapp is survived by his mother, Mrs. Venita Mariweather, of Moline, and his father, Charles Robert Sapp, Louisiana, Mo.

Capt. Norris T. Morton, a Bolling chaplain, went to the Lowe's home here immediately after the crash to inform the family.

A board of inquiry to investigate the crash was appointed by Col. Henry J. Amen, commanding officer at Bolling.

'E for Effort' Saves Day in Morningside

The town fathers of Morningside got an "E for Effort" yesterday, and saved school bus service for the children of the community.

An ultimatum was given town heads December 1 by Prince Georges County school authorities to repair Woodland dr. by yesterday—or else.

The "or else" was discontinuance of bus service over the rutted street, adding a half mile walking distance for school children.

John W. Helm, supervisor of school transportation for the county, yesterday inspected the street and approved continued bus service.

"The street is not yet up to par," Helm said, "but there is ample evidence that efforts are being made for its improvement."

Cloudy and Cold Weather to Continue in Washington Area; Northern and Central Virginia Shedding Blanket of Snow

The Washington Post

Cloudy and continued cold weather was forecast for snow-splotched Washington today.

The prospect of early-morning temperatures of 27 indicated the District's remaining inch of snow would survive most of the day. The mercury should reach 37 before sundown, the Weather Bureau reported.

Northern and central Virginia felt winter's heavy hand most of all over the weekend. Sixteen schools were closed, including those in Fairfax County. But they will be open today, barring the unexpected.

State highway crews were summoned to keep roads open for the third weekend in succession.

U. S. 1 between Washington and Richmond was blocked in two spots until early yesterday by a slippery hill near Lorton and by a tractor-trailer that jack-knifed and blocked the road below Fredericksburg. State police said stalled cars clogged long stretches of the highway during the heavy Sunday night snowfall.

Frederick County, Va., west of Washington, measured 15 inches of snow yesterday morning.

Thailanders, Australian See 1st Snow

The snowfall that was just another inconvenience for many Washingtonians yesterday became a thing of white magic for two children from Thailand and a young woman from Australia.

It was the first snow they ever had seen.

The 3-year-old daughter and 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Prasong Pibulsonggram, of the Thailand Embassy, learned that "hima" is far more than a Siamese word.

Ruengvali and her brother, Puit, sniffed, ate and threw great quantities of "hima," or snow, in the back yard of their home at 3461 Macomb st. nw. in a climate far colder than that of their native Bangkok, Thailand.

Maree Beck, a secretary at the India Embassy, formerly of Sydney, Australia, where the beaches are frequented the year around, also enjoyed a snow frolic for the first time.

She joined the tots from Thailand in building their first snow man. The Australian lass soon learned that the white fluff can turn fingers frigid and blue.

But her small companions were oblivious to the cold. They took handfuls into the house and were dismayed to learn that lovely white snowballs soon perish in warm living rooms.

This Session

D. C. Crime Bill May Be Introduced

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) said last night there is a possibility the long-awaited crime enforcement reform bill for the District will be introduced in the House at the present session of Congress. Previously he had said he would not present the measure until next session.

Davis, chairman of the House District Subcommittee which has conducted a year-long investigation of crime here, made the statement at the close of a 2½-hour closed conference with the District's top police officials.

He said his committee is winding up its study, but declined to comment on last night's meeting.

A tentative draft of the bill, proposing stiffer penalties for habitual criminals and other changes was distributed to law enforcement officials three months ago.

Attending last night's meeting were Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, Inspector Robert V. Murray, Inspector Walter H. Storm, Capt. Earl P. Hartman of the police statistics bureau, and Chief of Park Police Mark H. Raspberry.

Southwest Washington Tree Lighting Friday

More than 2000 children from southwest Washington will be on hand for the annual lighting of the Christmas tree at 7th and H sts. sw. at 7 p. m. Friday.

A party with refreshments and entertainment will follow at Jefferson Junior High School, where a dance will be held for teen-agers at 8:30 p. m. The affair is sponsored by residents of the southwest section.

Bill Would Drop Meals From D. C. Sales Tax Setup

Levy on Food Unfair, City Can Afford Loss of $800,000, McMillan Declares

A bill to exempt all restaurant meals from the District sales tax was dropped in the House hopper yesterday by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.).

Presently the 2 percent gross levy is applied to restaurant and hotel meals costing $1.26 or more. Meals under that amount are exempt.

The House District Committee chairman said he introduced the bill because he believes the tax on food is unfair and because he thinks the District treasury can stand the revenue loss which the proposed exemption would bring.

Loss of $800,000

Edward A. Dent, District tax assessor, estimated the elimination of the tax on meals will mean a revenue loss of about $800,000 annually.

The McMillan proposal is identical to one of three changes recently invoked in Maryland's sales tax.

McMillan said he personally would not urge adoption here of the other two "easing up" revisions of the Maryland levy. They are: 1. Raising the tax-exempt purchase from 14 cents to 51 cents, and 2. Adding soap, baby oils and powder, cleansing fluids and detergents to the exempt list.

Different Collection

Dent is understood to oppose these changes on grounds they would be unworkable here since the collection method in the two jurisdictons is different.

The tax official estimates the District would lose about three million dollars in revenue if the District tax was brought completely in line with Maryland's sales levy. The District tax is now yielding about 14 million dollars annually.

McMillan said no action will be taken this session but promised to reintroduce the measure in January when the next Congress convenes.

Budget Officer

Lieut. Cox Of Police Kills Self

Lieut. James H. Cox, 39, budget officer for the Metropolitan Police Department, shot himself to death yesterday morning in the bedroom of his home at 1846 Park rd. nw.

He was found shortly after 7:30 a. m. by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Cox, who told police he had been worried about loss of weight and depressed about his health.

She told police she was in the bathroom when she heard a noise about 7:30 a. m. She did not recognize it as a shot, police said.

A few minutes later, however, when Lieutenant Cox failed to reply when she asked if he was ready to go to work, Mrs. Cox entered the bedroom and found his body stretched across the bed, according to police.

A .32-caliber semiautomatic revolver rested on the floor beneath his right hand, which dangled over the side. He had shot himself above the right temple, the bullet passing through his head, police said. He was pronounced dead at 8:05 a. m. by Dr. Edward S. Nicklas, the family physician.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

LIEUT. JAMES H. COX
. . . Found dead in bedroom

Lieutenant Cox was wearing trousers and a sports shirt but wore no shoes. A mirror was propped on top of a cracker box on the night table beside the bed. Police said he probably looked into the mirror at the time he fired the gun.

Mrs. Cox told police her husband had been coughing badly and was worried about the effects of loss of weight.

In addition to his work of drafting the department budgets, Lieutenant Cox also was in charge of purchasing and accounts.

Police said both of Lieutenant Cox's jobs carried with them considerable strain and tension, adding that he was very conscientious and "one of the hardest working policemen on the force."

Lieutenant Cox's books were last audited in May and found to be in complete order, officials said.

Appointed to the force on October 16, 1935, Lieutenant Cox was moved into the chief clerk's office two years later. He was promoted to sergeant July 5, 1944, and to lieutenant August 1, 1947.

Besides his wife, who was elected president of the District Congress of P arents and Teachers last year, he is survived by three children, James, jr., 15; Girard, 13, and Elizabeth, 12.

His body will be sent to Montross, Va., where funeral services will be held today at 2 p. m.

1000 Students Set to Move to Simon School

A thousand students now attending the Patterson and Congress Heights schools will move into the new Simon Elementary School, 4th st. and Mississippi ave. se., December 21, school officials announced yesterday. Part-time instruction for more than 1500 children at the two schools will end with the move.

The 24-classroom school was inspected and approved yesterday by the Board of Education's buildings and grounds committee. The school, built at a cost of $797,125, contains in addition to the classrooms, two kindergarten rooms, two multipurpose rooms, a library, auditorium, lunchroom and recreational rooms, including showers.

James W. Taylor, former principal of the Brent and Fairbrother schools, has been appointed principal of the new school named for the late Dr. Abram Simon, former president of the District Board of Education.

Hearing Set For 5 Bench Nominations

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee will hold a public hearing at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday on the nominations of Walter M. Bastian to Municipal Court here and four other bench appointments elsewhere.

In a move to assure cooperation in the present lame duck session, Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) said yesterday his full committee had authorized him to report the nominations directly to the Senate, if they win subcommittee approval, as expected.

Normally the full committee would be called together to act on subcommittee recommendations.

Eligibility for Clinic Care At District Hospitals Rapped

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

District hospitals are using a false and too liberal standard of eligibility in accepting patients for clinic care at District expense, it was charged yesterday.

The net result, said Dr. Philip A. E. Stebbing, superintendent of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, is that needy persons are denied hospitalization, while "clinic care is growing by leaps and bounds."

Dr. Stebbing made the charge is reporting the recommendations yesterday for a study group on medical charities of the United Community Services' health section.

He later said that about half of the annual appropriation by the District for hospital care of the needy in nonprofit hospitals here is being spent for outpatient services rather than for bed patients.

Dr. Stebbing advanced the committee's recommendation that special eligibility standards for clinic care be set up by law, as are the present standards for actual hospitalization.

"The committee members," reported Dr. Stebbing, "feel that outpatients are not sufficiently screened."

Congress, it was explained, annually appropriates funds to pay local hospitals for care of the "medically indigent" in other than Gallinger and other District-operated institutions.

Dr. Stebbing pointed out that the hospitals' billings use up the annual fund (between $600,000 and $700,000) "in the first 9 or 10 months," thereby denying hospitalization to many of those eligible at the year's end.

In another section committee report yesterday, Miss Charlotte Hasselbusch, representing the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society, urged the hiring of more nurses for "field and school services."

She pointed out that District Health Department statistics for 1949 show that, of 24,700 defects" found in District school children, some 8400 were later reported "corrected." More nurses, she said, could do much to better this ratio.

Cleared in Death

Color of Hair Saves Sailor In Car Case

The color of his hair saved Hospitalman Second Class William D. O'Leary, 24, from a possible manslaughter conviction in Bethesda Police Court yesterday.

Charged with manslaughter in the traffic death October 24 of Hospitalman Second Class George A. Doggett, 29, O'Leary testified that Doggett was driving his car when it collided with another car on East-West Highway.

A witness to the accident, Mrs. Dorothy E. See, 10003 Portland rd., Silver Spring, Md., supported his testimony when she said that both men were thrown out the driver's side of the car but the "light-haired one" came out first. O'Leary is dark-haired, Doggett's hair was blond.

Both O'Leary and Doggett were attached to the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda. O'Leary said they had had four or five beers at the Red Fox in Bethesda and were on their way to the Tick-Tock Tavern in Prince Georges County when the collision occurred. Driver of the other car was Neil B. Collings, 30, of 4306 Montgomery ave., Bethesda.

Chevy Chase Boy, 2½, Drowns In Neighbor's Backyard Pond

The 2½-year-old son of an American Broadcasting Co. attorney drowned in a neighbor's backyard pond in Chevy Chase yesterday, after apparently climbing a 4-foot fence surrounding it.

The child, Dennis M. McKenna, 32 E. Williams la., was pronounced dead at 1:10 p. m., after artificial respiration and an inhalator had failed to revive him.

James A. McKenna, jr., his father, told police the boy had been playing in the neighborhood with another son, James, 5. They became separated about noon, and Mrs. McKenna told police the younger boy could not be found.

Dennis' body was discovered by Mrs. Stephen O. Kohout of 34 E. Woodbine st. in the three-foot-deep pond in her back yard, which adjoins that of the McKennas.

Mrs. Kohout said that early yesterday afternoon she noticed a woman neighbor in the back yard. She went outside and was told the McKenna boy was missing. They saw small footprints leading from the wire fence to the edge of the pond.

Mrs. Kohout raked the pond and found Dennis' body.

Mrs. Kohout said she telephoned her husband, who was out of town, to inform him of the tragedy. They agreed to drain the pond immediately. They had considered doing so before, she recalled, but felt the fences were sufficient protection for children.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, county medical examiner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Besides James, the McKennas have two children, Michelle, 8, and Matthew, 6 months.

Funeral services for Dennis will be private.

Company Tools Used to Loot Plumbing Co.'s Safe of $700

Using company tools, thieves forced open the safe at the Robert E. Anderson Plumbing Co., 2901 V st. ne., and stole $700 in cash over the weekend.

To make matters worse, they also used a company ladder, left on a rear platform of the building, to climb to a second floor window, which they broke open to gain entry, police said.

The theft occurred sometime between 5 p. m. Friday and 6:40 a. m. yesterday, Carl E. Poore, manager, reported.

Another weekend housebreaking was reported in the building at 730 11th st. nw., where William E. Poulton, vice president of the Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association, told police a mail box was forced open in the basement.

The thief apparently concealed himself in the building before it was closed at 2 p. m. Saturday, police said. Post office inspectors will try to determine if anything was taken from the box.

Firemen Rescue 3 Children From Smoke-Filled Apartment

Three young children were rescued by firemen yesterday from a smoke-filled apartment house at 143 Rhode Island ave. nw., where a fire damaged the basement.

Brought down from their third-floor apartment by ladder were Frances Elaine Joyner, 6; her brother Herman Earl, 2, and sister, Joyce, 1.

The alarm was turned in about 2:30 p. m. by Mrs. Emma Harley, who lives on the first floor. Her left knee was injured when she jumped from a first floor window and was given first aid on the scene.

Herman Joyner, father of the three children, said he left the apartment for only a few minutes to get medicine at a nearby drugstore and returned to find the rescue in progress.

Fire damage was confined to the ceiling of the basement and the floor of the first floor. Its origin was undetermined.

'Dick' Tennyson, 52, Sports Leader, Dies

Richard S. (Dick) Tennyson, 52, who guided amateur sports activities for two generations of Washingtonians during a 30-year career in playground and recreation work, died Sunday night at Emergency Hospital after a lingering illness.

Mr. Tennyson

Through the District Playground Department and later the District Recreation Department, Mr. Tennyson paved the way for thousands to become sports participants and spectators.

Beginning when modern traffic was first forcing youngsters off the streets, Mr. Tennyson was a one-man advocate of playgrounds.

Although he played sandlot baseball and football, he was most prominent as an athlete as a member of Georgetown University relay teams.

Mr. Tennyson was born in Washington and attended Georgetown University after graduating from the Holy Trinity Parochial School, Business High School and Georgetown Prep School.

His first playground assignment was as assistant director of Garfield Playground. In 1923, he became director of boys' activities and assistant to the superintendent of playgrounds.

He organized, with the aid of The Washington Post, the Capital City Baseball Leagues which numbered its players of all ages in the thousands.

Mr. Tennyson initiated or participated in practically every amateur sports movement in the city during his time. One of his innovations were the Junior Olympics, in which elementary school children competed in a big-league atmosphere.

Since 1942 he has served as director of the adult division of the Recreation Department. He was chairman of several golf and tennis associations and directed the old Washington and Maryland soccer leagues.

Mr. Tennyson was a leading figure in the 10-mile marathon runs that were so popular here on July 4 for many years. He also figured in promotion of the AAU marathons here in later years.

As chairman of the Water Safety Committee of the District Red Cross, Mr. Tennyson helped conceive the idea of the President's Cup Regatta.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Tuesday at St. Paul's Catholic Church, 15th and V sts. nw. Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Tennyson lived at 2120 16th st. nw. and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Virginia Tennyson, and two sisters, Miss Bernadette Tennyson and Mrs. Theresa Crow, both of Washington.

68 Years Old

Mrs. Turner Dies; Retired Draftsman

Mrs. Leigh B. Turner, 68, mother of William R. Turner, secretary of the Citizens Committee for Good Government in Prince Georges County, died Sunday at the Washington Home for Incurables. She had been a patient there for three months.

A native of Ouray, Colo., she was mining draftsman, for the Silver King Coalition Mines near Salt Lake City. In addition, she was a portrait painter and operated an art school there. After her retirement in 1948, she came here to live with her son at 1207 Chillum Manor rd., Chillum, Md.

Her son is an electrical engineer at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md.

Besides her son, she is survived by her husband, Oscar R. Turner of Philadelphia, a daughter, Dr. Mary Lou Haanes, Norristown, Pa., and two brothers.

Funeral services will be held today at 3:30 p. m. at the Chevy Chase funeral home. Burial will be private.

Cup Committee Gives Aggies Stolen $672

The American Legion Presidential Cup Game Committee yesterday reimbursed the Texas Aggie football players with the $672 that was stolen from them in their dressing room Saturday while they were playing Georgia at Byrd Stadium.

A check for the amount was given the Aggies by Charles Garity, general chairman of the Cup committee, shortly before the Aggies left for home.

Meanwhile, University of Maryland police reported they had no clues on the robbery. They are still investigating.

The $672 the Legion paid the players came out of the general fund. The Legion sponsors are believed to have lost about $20,000 on the Cup Game. An official statement is expected to be released next week.

Jewish Center to Hold Health Film Forum

The Jewish Community Center and the Washington Institute of Mental Health will hold their third health film forum at 8:30 today in the Cafritz Auditorium at the center, 1529 16th st. nw.

The film, "Palmour Street," dealing with the problems of family adjustment, will be introduced by Dr. Rex E. Buxton, who will also lead the discussion.

Trailer Owner Fails To Show Up in Court

A Silver Spring woman, convicted of maintaining a nuisance in her trailer home, failed to appear in Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., for sentencing yesterday.

Judge Charles W. Woodward indicated he will issue a bench warrant today for the arrest of Mrs. Helen Barbour, whose trailer is located at Patton dr. and Miles rd., Silver Spring.

S. W. Harper, Former Red Cross Official, Dies

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 11 (AP).—An extended illness took the life yesterday of Samuel W. Harper, 76, prominent Wheeling banker and industrialist.

Mr. Harper was board chairman and former president of the Wheeling Dollar Savings and Trust Company, with which he had been associated for 31 years.

During World War I he was director of the American Red Cross bureau of personnel in Washington.

Retired Navy Pilot Dies Of Cancer

Lieut. Edward Sanford Mulheron, 51, retired Navy pilot and 1923 Annapolis graduate, died of cancer at the Bethesda Naval Hospital Sunday.

While stationed with a flight training squadron at the Naval Academy in 1929, Lieutenant Mulheron piloted a seaplane to the rescue of five children in a river near St. Michaels, Md. On a routine check flight, he discovered the two boys and three girls struggling in the water near their overturned sailboat and maneuvered his plane to their aid.

A native of Binghamton, N. Y. Lieutenant Mulheron earned his pilot wings at the Pensacola Air Training Station in 1928. He was attached to the Langley, Navy's first aircraft carrier, in the early 30s, and was stationed at various times in Pearl Harbor, China and the Philippines.

Before his retirement for disability in 1939, he was attached to the carrier Enterprise.

He is survived by a daughter, Carol Ann, 16, a Georgetown Visitation Convent student, and a son, Martin Mulheron, 14, now attending Leonard Hall Academy, Leonardtown, Md.

Funeral services will be at Fort Myer Chapel on Wednesday at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Leonard Vogel Dies; Former Area Resident

Leonard J. Vogel, former area resident, died Saturday at his home in Atlanta, Ga. He was the son of Mrs. Theodore R. Vogel of 1613 N. Lincoln st., Arlington, Va.

A native of Pensacola, Fla., Mr. Vogel came to Washington in his youth with his parents. He attended Central High School and later graduated from the University of Maryland with a degree in electrical engineering.

Mrs. Norton, Social Welfare Worker, Dies

Mrs. Thomas Norton, 50, a leader in social welfare work in Washington and Richmond, and retired executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies here, died Sunday of a heart ailment.

Mrs. Norton

Mrs. Norton, known for her activities in Community Chest work and charity welfare agencies, died at her home, 6400 Queens Chapel rd., Hyattsville, Md. She had retired in 1948 due to ill health and recently had spent five weeks in Georgetown Hospital.

Mrs. Norton was appointed acting executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies in July, 1946.

Born in Louisville, Ky., Mrs. Norton spent most of her active welfare life in Richmond, Va. Her father, the late William J. Haraham, was formerly president of the Chespeake & Ohio and three other railroads.

One of the organizers and executive secretary of the Bureau of Catholic Charities in Richmond, Mrs. Norton served in an administrative capacity on the Community Chest Board there.

In 1941, she became supervisor of agency field work at the Public Assistance Division here for students of the National Catholic School of Social Service. Two years later she joined the council as secretary for the Family and Child Welfare Division. She was concerned with better substance for deserted mothers, delinquency problems and improved conditions for Negroes.

Even after her retirement in 1948, Mrs. Norton remained active as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Washington Home for Foundlings, the Community Chest Federation and the Christ Guild Society.

Mrs. Norton graduated in social work from Trinity College in 1921, received a master's degree from William and Mary College in 1922 and took post graduate work at the New York School of Social Services.

Mrs. Norton is survived by her husband, an official of the International Trade Office of the Department of Commerce. Other survivors are four brothers and five sisters.

Requiem mass will be said at 10 a. m., Thursday in St. Jerome's Catholic Church in Hyattsville, Md. Burial will be in Richmond.

Henry Herrell Dies; Retired Va. Farmer

Henry S. Herrell, 82, who retired 17 years ago from his 200-acre Haymarket, Va., farm, died at his home, 3736 W st. nw. Saturday night. He had been ill with heart and arthritis complications for several years.

Mr. Herrell

Born in Loudoun County, Va., he was a farmer in that area for 30 years. Later, Mr. Herrell managed the Snowhill dairy and stock farms near Haymarket for 10 years. He owned and operated his own farm, Blondell, for a decade before his retirement.

He and his wife, Ida, moved to Washington in 1933. The year following their golden wedding anniversary, 1945, Mrs. Herrell died, and a niece, Mrs. Boyd Parker and her husband then lived with him at his home.

Surviving are three sons, Russell Herrell, retired Government Printing Office executive, of the Westchester apartments; Henry G. Herrell, assistant to the Secretary of Agricultutre in the Produce and Marketing Division, of 4820 14th st. nw.; Calvin B. Herrell, assistant to Federal dispersing officer, Treasury Department, of 3600 S. Wakefield st., Fairlington, Va.; and three daughters, Mrs. Charles J. Parish of California; Mrs. Albert Etterback of Haymarket, Va., and Mrs. Richard B. Gossan of 4022 18th rd. N., Arlington. Two brothers, one sister and 10 grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., at 11:30 a. m. today. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Former Navy Clerk Dies On Street

Joseph Kervick Hayden, 67, retired Naval Gun Factory clerk, of 4509 West Virginia ave., Bethesda, Md., died after collapsing while walking in the 7700 block of Wisconsin ave.

Mr. Hayden, who had been suffering from a heart ailment for several years, slumped to the sidewalk. Efforts of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad to revive him were futile. Dr. F. J. Broschart, county medical examiner, issued a certificaet of death from natural causes.

Mr. Hayden, who was born in Charles County, Md., has lived in the Washington area most of his life. He was a clerk in the personnel office at the gun factory, retiring about 10 years ago after 38 years of service.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Hayden; a sister, Mrs. Daisie Dent of Bethesda, and two brothers, Charles and Frank Hayden of Washington.

Requiem mass will be said at 9:30 a. m. Thursday at Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Bethesda. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Post, Parade Win Traffic Safety Awards

Merit safety plaques were presented yesterday to The Washington Post and its Sunday magazine supplement, nationally-distributed Parade.

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer made the presentations on behalf of Live magazine and the National Safe Drivers Association, following a luncheon at the National Press Club.

Both plaques were given in recognition "for outstanding service in the field of traffic-accdent prevention."

The Washington Post's citation, accepted by Phillip L. Graham, president and publisher read:

"Live magazine and the National Safe Drivers Association have followed with interest during the past year The Washington Post's contributions through stories, photographs and illustrations in the field of educating both the pedestrians and drivers in the metropolitan area of Washington to the hazards of traffic accidents.

"The Washington Post's daily endeavors to bring about an improved attitude by both pedestrian and driver merits recognition.

"We feel that this service by The Washington Post to the community will lead to the progressive reduction of traffic accidents."

In accepting the award for Parade, Arthur H. Motley, editorial director, paid tribute to the press in general for its "selling the public on safety rather than merely telling them about it."

Radford Mobley, chief of the Washington bureau of Knight newspapers and president of the National Press Club, was master of ceremonies.

Among the guests of honor were: Eugene Meyer, president of the board of The Washington Post; Frank C. Waldroy, executive editor of the Times-Herald; Crosby N. Boyd, business manager of the Evening Star; J. Russell Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post; Jess Gorkin, editor of Parade; Columnists Drew Pearson and Fred Othman, and Oliver W. Boblitz, publisher of Live and executive director of the National Safe Drivers Association.

Father, Child Hurt in 3-Car N.E. Collision

Two persons were injured in a three-car collision at 18th and Monroe sts. ne. yesterday.

The driver of one car, Robert S. Anderson, 41, of 4313 Newton st., Colmar Manor, Md., was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible concussion and head lacerations. His 3-year-old daughter, Dorothy, was treated for head lacerations.

Police said Anderson was driving west on Monroe st. when he was struck by a car, headed south on 18th st. and driven by Edwin B. Schwimer, 47, of 102 Indian Spring dr., Silver Spring, Md.

A third car, traveling east on Monroe st. was sideswiped by the colliding cars. It was driven by Emmitt H. Pope, 41, who left the scene without giving his address, police said.

3 Motorists Absolved In Two Traffic Deaths

Three motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury at inquests yesterday in the traffic deaths of two pedestrians.

Cleared in the death of Mrs. Lizzie Whittington, 54, of 1365 Half st. sw., were Corpl. Wilbur D. Grover, 19, of 4201 S. Four Mile Run dr., Arlington, Va., and Albert E. Eschinger, 36, of 6229 Marlboro pike, Hillside, Md.

Mrs. Whittington was killed November 20 at 3rd and M sts. sw., when she was struck by a car driven by Grover and thrown into the path of Eschinger's car. The jury termed her death accidental.

Also termed accidental was the death of George W. Comack, 81, of 818 26th st. nw., fatally injured November 18 when he was struck by a car as he crossed the street at the District end of Memorial Bridge. The driver, George B. Shaw, 55, of Vienna, Va., was exonerated.

Knowles Pittsman Dies; Chicago Firm's Agent

Knowles Pittman, 57, Washington representative of the Clearing Machine Corp., Chicago, died Sunday at Doctors Hospital from complications following pneumonia.

A native of Shelton, Wash., Mr. Pittmann had been living at the Brighton Hotel, 2123 California st. nw., since last summer. He was a resident of Winnetka, Ill., where he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Catherine B. Pittman. A son, a daughter and two stepdaughters also survive.

He had been in the machine business for more than 30 years. Memorial services will be held December 10 in Kenilworth, Ill.

A. U. Citizens Ask Rerouting of Bus

The American University Park Citizen's Association last night asked rerouting of the American University Park bus line from 18th st., between I and P sts nw., to 20th st., to avoid traffic congestion.

The group also reiterated its opposition to the proposed reduction in weekend and evening service along the line.

In other action in Hurst Hall, American University, the group donated $50 to the American University building fund. Col. Frank H. Collins, division civilian defense chief, spoke on the community's civil defense setup.

Burleith Citizens

The Burleith Citizens Association last night discussed the District's civil defense program as it effects the Burleith community.

In other action at the meeting in the Gordon Junior High School, the group made plans to hold its annual election of officers next month.

Garfield-Douglass

The Garfield-Douglass Heights Civic Association last night recommended the deferment of policemen from military service.

The resolution passed at the meeting in the Turner School would permit policemen to volunteer and retain their seniority while in the service.

The group asked the District Commissioners to lower the height minimum for policemen from 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 7 inches to help fill the vacancies in the Metropolitan Police. The proposal would also advance the maximum age for recruits from 31 to 35.

Hillcrest Association

The Hillcrest Citizens Association last night indorsed an adult education program providing night school at Anacostia High School.

Mrs. Evelyn Mackintosh, chairman of the education committee, told the meeting in the East Washington Heights Baptist Church that school officials were considering the program and its establishment would depend on the community response to it.

In other actions the group approved a report calling for rerouting of certain bus lines to improve bus transportation facilities in Hillcrest; opposed the Hager proposal to merge Miner and Wilson Teachers Colleges, and recommended the setting aside of television channels for educational purposes.

It was announced that the association would have its Christmas tree lighting ceremony at 7:30 p. m., December 19, at the East Washington Heights Baptist Church, Branch and Alabama aves. se.

Northeast Boundary

The Northeast Boundary Citizens Association last night named a special committee to investigate overcrowding in area schools.

Allen Avery was appointed chairman of the group. In other action at the meeting in Burrville School, James A. Hayes was appointed chairman of a committee to organize civil defense activity in the community.

Glover Park

Two hundred persons last night attended the "biggest Christmas party ever held" by the Glover Park Citizens Association.

"It was a terrific feast," said Association President Thomas B. Scott of the baked ham with trimmings, the ice cream and other delicacies provided by Dr. Samuel Eisenberg, a 20-year member who sponsored the party. A three-piece group provided Christmas music.

Business came before pleasure at the gathering in the Stoddert School. In a short session the group requested more postal pickup service in the community and donated $25 for a Christmas party for the Industrial Home School.

Mount Pleasant

President Herbert P. Leeman, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, last night called for unity and an end to criticism of the national Administration in the current crisis.

Leeman spoke at a meeting of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association in the Mount Pleasant Library. The meeting was followed by a Christmas party.

Kalorama Association

The Kalorama Citizens Association last night voted to raise its annual dues from $1 to $1.25, effective January 1.

Herbert Gill, assistant to the president of the Washington Gas Light Co., discussed some of the issues involved in the current court fight on the rate raise granted the company earlier this year. The meeting was held at the Adams School.

Falls Church Stops School's Free Water

The Falls Church City Council at its meeting last night voted to stop supplying St. James' Catholic School with free water.

Although the school has been supplied by the city in past years with free water, council members said they had discovered the Virginia Code provides that no private school or charitable organization shall be supplied free if it is governed by a church.

The council said it favors inclusion of a new elementary school in the present school construction program which is being sought by residents of Falls Church and the school board.

It was decided by council members that the director of public utilities is to act as city manager when the latter is not available for duty.

First readings were held on three ordinances: one accepting a bid from the Central National Bank of Richmond on a $130,000 loan for extension of the city's water system; a second providing amendments to the business license tax, and a third providing for new parking meter areas.

Second readings and final passage of the ordinances will take place at the next meeting December 26.

Police Without Clew In $35,825 Holdup

Washington police are still running down information on last Thursday's $35,825 hold-up of the National Metropolitan Bank's branch in Spring Valley, but have not turned up a substantial clew.

Inspector Robert V. Murray, head of the detective bureau, said yesterday the investigation is continuing but police so far have drawn only blanks.

10-Cent Wage Hike Ordered For Pavers

A wage contract providing for a 10-cent hourly increase for more than 600 employes in the paving industry here became effective yesterday.

It was negotiated last month between Daniel Quigley, regional director of the United Construction Workers, District 50 of the United Mine Workers, and Edward Costigan, representing an employers group of six contractors.

Costigan is president of Corson & Gruman Co., one of the six. The others are Community Paving Co., Curtin & Johnson, Inc., E. B. Donaldson & Bros.; Donaldson Paving Co. Inc., and McGuire & Rolfe, Inc.

The contract runs until January 1, 1952, with a six-month wage reopener clause. Both union and management said the raise was granted on the basis of a cost-of-living increase.

Wages for the United Construction Worker local, No. 404, now range from $1.20. The employers' group, Paving Contractors, represents all but two contracting firms in the Washington area.

Farm Speakers Blast Controls, Rationing

DALLAS, Dec. 11 (AP). — The American farmer doesn't want either price controls or rationing, speakers at the American Farm Bureau Federation convention said today.

Federation President Allan B. Kline led off:

"Price control does not control inflation; it is the handmaiden of inflation; it covers it up." He suggested higher taxes as an inflation control.

E. Howard Hill, Iowa Farm Bureau president, said polls in his State show the people don't want rationing. He also said "price ceilings do not control inflation in the least."

H. H. Alp, director of the federation's poultry department, said the department's advisory committee "recommends that there be no price ceilings and no rationing."

1½ Million Represented

Delegates representing a million and a half farm families in 45 states and Puerto Rico attended separate conferences today. The formal convention sessions begin Tuesday.

At the joint commodity conference, Kline condemned price controls on the ground that they interfere with the best weapon against inflation—increased production.

"The only way I know to get pigs is to breed sows," the federation chief said. He said price controls would bring black markets and government subsidies.

At the same conference in the big state fair auditorium, a government spokesman said, "None of us knows . . . when and whether we may have price controls and consumer rationing." Oris V. Wells, chief of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Agricultural Economics, agreed with Kline that "the most effective control . . . lies in increased production."

Administration Assailed

Meanwhile, other speakers leveled their guns at the Administration.

Roger Fleming, the federation's secretary-treasury, charged that Government farm agencies seek to speak for farmers and weaken "free farmer organizations." He told rural youth conference:

"Evidently, the present Secretary of Agriculture isn't too much interested in the development of free farmer organizations. The impact of what he does is to try to reduce the capacity of farmers to develop independent farm organizations which farmers can own, control and operate."

Ed Lipscomb, public relations director of the National Cotton Council, in addressing the women's conference, attacked "promoters of public paternalism, disciples of the superstate, advocates of Government by fairy godmother."

Lipscomb said the Nation faces its greatest ordeal "with no realistic fiscal policy, no serious effort to curtail extravagant nonessential civilian services and with a hopeless price control law."

Deficit financing is a major factor in inflation, J. O. Knapp, West Virginia Extension Service director, told the organization conference. "Deficit financing of World War II almost cut in half what the dollar will buy. We cannot afford to have this happen again," Knapp said. "The answer seems to be in a pay-as-we-go program."

Prosecution Eyed in GI School Probe

By The Associated Press

Chairman Teague (D., Tex.) of a House committee investigating alleged abuses in the GI training program said yesterday that its hearing record will be made available to the United States Attorney General.

A demand for this action was made by Representative Weichel (R., Ohio) as two GI school operators testified that they also headed business firms that supplied tools and materials to their schools at a profit.

Weichel told the committee he wanted a further investigation to see if criminal conspiracy laws have been violated.

The Ohioan made his demand after hearing testimony of C. Jeff Jennings, secretary-treasurer of the Texas Trade School, Dallas, and the Southern Trade School, New Orleans.

Jennings testified he is also president of the General Trading Corp., Dallas, which sells materials to the schools at retail prices after obtaining them from manufacturers or jobbers at wholesale.

He told the committee that the C. E. Marshall Co., Chicago supplier of watchmaking tools, advised the Texas Trade School in January, 1949, that it did not want to continue a policy of selling tools to the school at a discount ranging from 20 to about 33 percent.

Jennines testified that the General Trading Corp. was formed in January, 1950, and became an agent for the Marshall firm.

The Marshall firm, he said, claimed the continuance of the discount system to the school created "embarrassing and difficult situations."

Jennings also testified that increased prices for tools were then charged to the Veterans' Administration.

He said the commissions the corporation received for one three-month period amount to about $1138.

George W. Sims, jr., owner of the Terre Haute (Ind.) School of Watchmaking, told the committee he organized George W. Sims & Sons, Inc., in 1948 to supply tools and watchmaking materials to the school and to professional watchmakers in the area.

He testified that the supply firm buys its materials at wholesale and sells them at a markup of from 20 to 33 percent.

The witness said the Marshall firm had nothing to do with his organization of the supply company and had no control over it.

Attlee Leaves N. Y. On Home Trip

NEW YORK, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—British Prime Minister Clement Attlee left by plane for London tonight after a week of conferences with United States and Canadian leaders.

Attlee returned to New York's Idlewild Airport from Ottawa because a heavy snowstorm prevented his planned flight from the Canadian capital to Montreal.

The Prime Minister and his 19-man party took off at 6:25 p. m.

DR. DAVID E. PRICE of 208 Elsmere ave., Bethesda, yesterday was appointed Assistant Surgeon General of Public Health Service and director of its National Institutes of Health. He will head the Health Service's new ACTH-cortisone research program and a new research project in metabolic and neurological diseases

Senate Votes Union Shop for Rails, Airlines

By the United Press

The Senate passed a bill to permit the union shop and dues check-off in the railroad and airlines industries yesterday after rejecting attempts to tack on "States' rights" and "civil rights" amendments.

A similar bill is pending in the House, but prospects are slim for passage at the "lame-duck" session. If it is not approved, both chambers will have to act on it again in the new Congress.

All forms of "union security" contracts have been outlawed in the railroad and airlines industries under the Railway Labor Act of 1934. The Senate bill, which was supported by Democrats and Republicans on the Labor Committee, would permit union shop agreements under restrictions similar to those in the Taft-Hartley law.

Thus, if both sides agreed, railway management and unions could sign contracts requiring new employes to join a union within 60 days.

The Senate defeated, 59 to 23, a "States' rights" amendment sponsored by Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.). This would have nullified the bill in those States which outlaw the union shop or other "union security" contracts.

An antisegregation amendment, offered by Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) was rejected, 64 to 17. It would have denied recognition to unions discriminating against members because of race or religion.

After these proposals were defeated, the Senate passed the bill by an overwhelming vote.

President Truman had recommended passage of the measure at the lame-duck session. He included it among measures to be enacted "if possible," but not among those of "greatest urgency."

Arlington Tax Deadline Today

Today is the last day Arlington residents can pay their poll taxes and still qualify to vote in any school bond election before June 12, 1951, Ivan A. Booker, County P.-T.A. Council President, warned last night.

December 5 was the regular poll tax deadline, but the tax will be accepted through today on payment of a small penalty. This would qualify those who paid to vote in any special election called before June.

A proposed $7,450,000 Arlington school construction bond issue was defeated at the polls November 7. The County Republican Committee promptly announced it would petition for a new election for $3,515,000 to build new schools.

The P.-T.A. Council criticized the GOP proposal as "inadequate" and suggested a $5,830,000 bond issue instead. The County Democratic Committee also is studying a bond proposal.

Portland Oregonian Is Sold to Newhouse

PORTLAND, Oreg., Dec. 11 (U.P.). The 100-year-old Portland Oregonian, one of the West's oldest newspapers, has been sold to Samuel I. Newhouse, Eastern publisher, for a sum exceeding five million dollars, E. B. MacNaughton, president of the Oregonian Publishing Co., announced tonight.

Sign Company Employe Shot At His Desk

An employe of the Arrow Sign Co., 424 4th st. ne., was wounded, apparently by a stray bullet, while at work yesterday afternoon.

Police said Bela Szebedos, 39, of 4835 Georgia ave. nw., was bending over a desk on the second floor about 4 p. m. when a bullet pierced a window 20 feet away and grazed his scalp. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Szebedos, a native of Hungary who came to this country about a year and a half ago, told police he had neither enemies nor friends here and knew of no reason why anyone would shoot at him. Police said a shade was drawn down to the sill of the window and Szebedos could not have been seen from outside.

They were investigating a report that several youngsters were seen playing in a vacant garage near the Arrow Sign Co. around the time of the shooting and may have had a gun.

Union Branded 'Red'

OTTAWA, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—The Labor Relations Board today revoked the Canadian Seamen's Union's bargaining certificate with a ship line on the ground that it was a "Communist-dominated organization and not a trade union."

Making Christmas Day Plans

By Marie McNair

THE FIRST FAMILY is expected to spend Christmas again this year at the family home in Independence. Mrs. Truman and her mother, Mrs. David Wallace, will leave this week for Independence and Margaret, it is hoped, will join them there later. President Truman's plans for the holiday, when announced, are expected to state that he'll be with his family on Christmas Day.

WITH the White House family away, the Nation's No. 2 household will celebrate the holidays in Washington.

Vice President and Mrs. Barkley will keep open house for the Barkleys and the Hadleys on Christmas and that means all the young members of the family are expected to drop in from 1 p. m. until?

Jane Hadley, Mrs. Barkley's younger daughter, leaves her classes at Holton-Arms on Friday; Anne will be home next Monday from Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans.

THERE'LL be no formal dinner on Christmas for the Barkley clan, but Mrs. Barkley will have a turkey at one end of the buffet table, a ham at the other, and a couple of hot casserole dishes besides. The teen-agers can bring their dates if they like, stay as long or as briefly as they wish.

The Veep's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt, will be there and their four sons, Max, jr., from Princeton; Bill from South Kent and Tom from Taft School, and young Stephen.

Christmas Day visitors will also include the Veep's other son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, and their young daughter, Mimi.

The dinner in honor of President and Mrs. Truman to be given Thursday evening by Vice President and Mrs. Barkley has been temporarily postponed.

PARTY PARADE:

Ato Akhilou Hafte Wold, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Ethiopia, who heads his country's delegation to U. N., was guest of honor at a reception yesterday afternoon given by the Ambassador of Ethiopia and Mme. Imru at the Shoreham Hotel. Among the 200 or more guests were Chiefs of Mission of the Diplomatic Corps, representatives of the State Department, members of the Cabinet and the Congress and their wives.

Parties yesterday also included Mrs. Benjamin H. Lingo's tea for her daughter, Jane, in honor of Miss Anne Misson, at the Dumbarton House, national headquarters for the Colonial Dames. Miss Misson, daughter of Rear Admiral Clinton A. Misson, USN (retired) and Mrs. Misson, will be married December 21 to Ensign Samuel F. Powell 3d, USN. The guests, numbering about 50, were all young people.

Then there was the reception given by Senora Amalia de Castillo Ledon, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, at Hotel 2400 in honor of the new chairman of the Organiation of American States, Dr. Hildebrando Accioly, Brazilian Ambassador to OAS, and the retiring chairman, Mexico's Ambassador to OAS, Dr. Luis Quintanilla.

DATEBOOK DATA:

HOLIDAY INVITATIONS fluttered to the desk yesterday like Sunday's snowflakes.

Mrs. Harry G. Meem's card read "Saturday, December 30, eggnog 5 to 7:30."

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kirke will be dispensing the Christmas brew on Christmas eve at their Westchester apartment; so will Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas on Christmas Day.

Capt. and Mrs. Ernest Becker will entertain at cocktails on December 17 and that's the day for another in a series of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rediker's afternoons "at home."

THEN the debuts!

Georgie McMahon and Suzanne Johnson at the Carlton Saturday, December 23; dancing from 5 to 7. Their parents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Frederick W. McMahon and Capt. and Mrs. Richard H. Phillips, the hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Armstrong Jones' tea dance at the Sulgrave Club for their daughter, Melissa, on December 22.

Dr. and Mrs. John Hugh Lyons' tea dance to introduce their daughter, Joan, on December 26 at the Carlton.

Miss Katherine Floyd-Jones Sherman will be a December 20 deb, her aunt, Mrs. Frank Slingluff presenting her at a tea dance at the Sulgrave Club.

Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Theron Lamar Caudle have taken the Sulgrave Club for the afternoon of December 29 when their daughter, Rose Antoinette, will make her bow at a tea with dancing.

Dr. Raymond T. Holden's daughter, Mary, will have their coming-out party at Chevy Chase Club, a tea dance on December 28.

Army debutante is Sarah Grace Robinson, whose parents, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clinton Robinson, have sent out invitations for a tea dance, Wednesday, December 27, at the Officers Club, Fort McNair.

Mrs. Elvin R. Heiberg and Mrs. Eleazar Parmly 3d's party for the debut of Mrs. Heiberg's granddaughter, and Mrs. Parmly's daughter, Dorethe, on December 21, from 5 to 7, at Dumbarton House in Georgetown.

AND—my first Christmas cards.

One from Wilfred and Olive Harrop from Sutton, Surrey, England—a pleasant reminder of a charming British couple who lived here during the war and are still hoping they can retutrn.

Another from "Lee Walsh of Julius Garfinckel and Co.," beautifully scrolled in red, gold and green on a deep blue background with "Noel" in inch-high letters of gold across the front.

TRAVEL DEPT:

Just back from a trip to California and Colorado, Mrs. Conger Pratt is taking off again on Wednesday, this time for a Caribbean cruise, and this time with General Pratt. They'll leave on Wednesday to sail from New Orleans, returning to Washington the early part of January. With the Pratts on the cruise will be Mr. and Mrs. Linton Reynolds Massey of Kinloch, Keswick, Va.

Mrs. Pratt saw all of her former Washington friends during her California visit. Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner entertained for her in San Francisco and the Ralph Snowden Hills in Santa Barbara. She also dined with Mrs. Richard McCreery in Burlingame and with Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. A. C. Wedemyer at the Presidio in San Francisco.

DEBUTANTE WHIRL:

The seven debutantes, from residential families of colonial descent to be presented by the Junior Assembly of Washington at the thirteenth annual Debutante Ball on December 20 include Miss Sarah Woodley Alexander, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Alexander; Miss Louise Cahill, daughter of Mrs. James A. Cahill; Miss Caro Butler, daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. William J. Butler, and Miss Jane McAtee, the Camden R. McAtee's daughter.

Also Miss Betsy MacCubbin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. MacCubbin; Miss Bette-Baron Smith, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. Hobart MacCubbin, and Miss Sally Zantzinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Zantzinger of Upper Marlboro, Md. The ball will be held at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss Lenroot Urges Greater Opportunities for Children

"We must dedicate ourselves to provide greater opportunities for children to develop the qualities they must have in the period of of stress and strain to come," Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Federal Security Agency, told a luncheon gathering of the Women's National Democratic Club yesterday.

Discussing "Forecasts from the White House Conference on Children and Youth," Miss Lenroot reviewed the work of the conclave, stated that recommendations made there have provided a "much better foundation for action than we have had before."

She hailed as especially significant the inclusion of young people in the conference and praised the volume of preparatory work which had been done to clarify the problems dealt with at the meetings. Miss Lenroot stressed that the conference was "just the beginning of a long-term program" of greater emphasis on the needs of children.

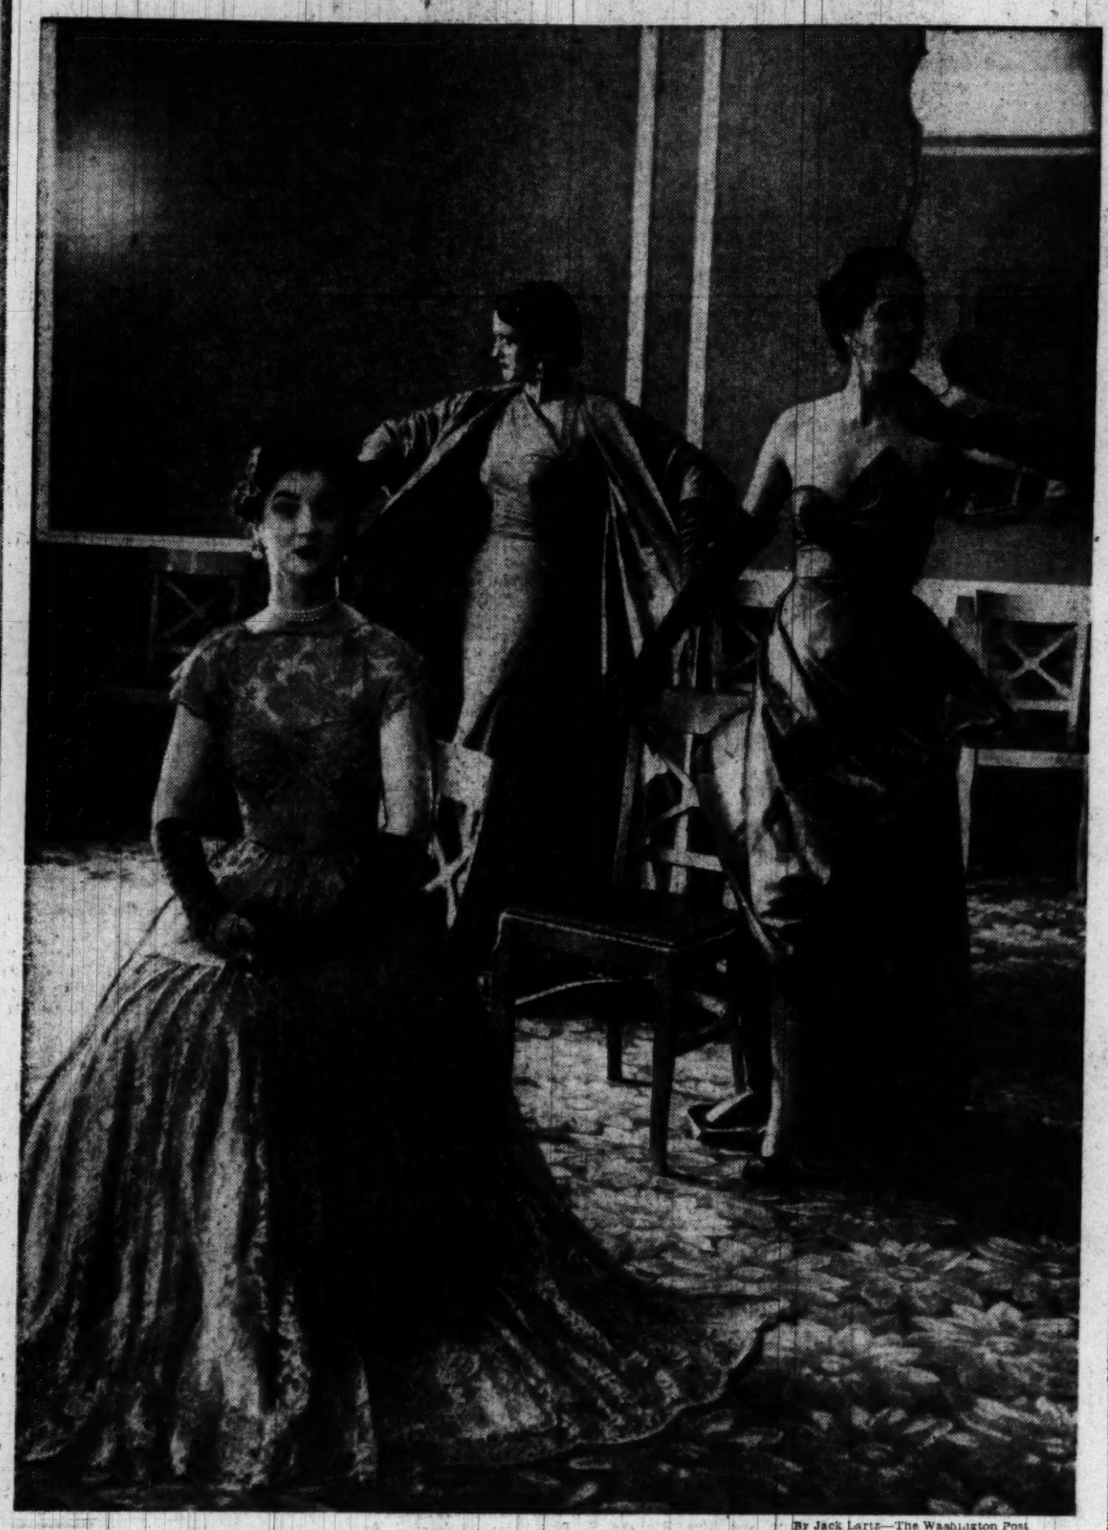
Coordinated Glamour



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

By Evelyn Hayes

ONLY A COLOR PORTRAIT could do justice to this picture! Highlight of Mme. Louise Brune's fashion show at the Raleigh Hotel on Saturday was this coordinated evening wardrobe in shades of shocking rose and violet. Centered in the layout of musical chairs is the star of this clothes-play—a fabulously full great cloak of shocking rose wool lined with taffeta in dramatic stripes. Worn with it is the matching wool one-shouldered, one-sided evening gown—the last word in moulded sheaths. On either side are two other gowns specially designed to go with the cloak.

At the left—a memory-making, full-skirted gown of matching rose lace.

To the right—stark striped drama in taffeta to echo the lining of the cloak.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING NOTE: There are all kinds of gifts you can give for Christmas—from the little stocking stuffer to a blank check for a custom-made ensemble from Mme. Brune. But the best gift of all is the gift of happiness. Add another name to your Christmas list right now—The Needy.

Give a little more now to the Community Chest that others may suffer a little less. Your gift may mean the difference between a little merry Christmas and no-Christmas-at-all to those who need your help.

Call Metropolitan 6262—NOW!—and pledge your help. No gift too small—no gift quite large enough. Between 9 and 12 this morning I'll be at the telephone, hoping to take your call.—E. H.

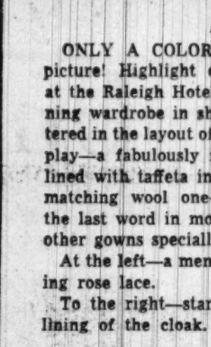
A Little Exercise Goes Far Before You've Limbered Up

By Ida Jean Kain

A LITTLE EXERCISE in the beginning goes a long way. Instead of learning through painful experience the results of overdoing, why not profit from the experience of others?

Let me tell you about a young-middle-age exerciser who started waist whittling with fine enthusiasm, determined to get in shape in a hurry. She blithely ignored the warning to ease into the exercise routine and work up gradually.

The instructions were to take the whirl-a-way 10 times only for the first few days, and toward the end of the week add a couple of counts each succeeding day. This seemed far too slow for our "athlete." She had heard that



Jean Crawford whirls through this exercise daily, doing many times that number, and figured that if a movie star could take it, she, being a former hockey player, class of '29, certainly could too!

SHE STARTED OUT briskly with 30 counts . . . without so much as even a warming-up stretch. The next morning, still grimly determined though not quite so eager, she had another go at it for 30 counts. But the third morning, she got the full impact of the overdose of exercise. Stiff, sore and aching, our model was convinced that calisthenics were not for her.

Perhaps you've had that same experience. If not, take warning. Too much exercise at the start is the quickest way to stop a streamlining program. You won't feel the painful effects the first day and may happily conclude the warning does not apply to you. The second day, still going strong, you decide to work off the slight stiffness. But the third day! Then you, too, turn into a three-day exerciser, and that's the end of the streamlining.

If you're interested in the explanation, here it is. When you bound into a rugged routine after years of inactivity, fatigue toxins instead of being speedily removed, accumulate in the muscles and make them stiff and sore.

EASE INTO EXERCISE gradually, and the muscles become more supple, circulation picks up and you can work up to a really streamlining program and feel the better for it.

In a waist-whittling routine, start with a stretch and a side-bend. If you have a normally strong back, progress to gentle twisting toward the end of the week. Easy does it . . .

Stand with arms arched lazily overhead. Slowly and smoothly reach up with the right arm, stretching all along the right side . . . release. Reach up with the left arm and pull along the left side. Three times on each side is ample. Follow through by adding a gentle bend . . . as you reach up with the right arm, bend slightly sidewards to the left, but without straining. Then reach up with left arm and bend smoothly to the right . . . no strain. Repeat the bend once more on each side.

Satin Accessories Give A Polished Finish

Take a look at the smart new satin accessories that are just appearing. These are just as dressy as velvet — may be worn with all the same clothes as velvet.

Take satin bags, for instance. The sleek satin boxes go with any dressy daytime or cocktail costume, also those with rhinestone studding belong in the evening glamour class. Satin belts follow the same pattern — either plain or jeweled.

Satin flowers have the crisp look women want today, so do slipper satin scarfs. Colors? Black and navy — but for real news — violet, white and pale champagne.

League Marks 30th Birthday

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters of the District of Columbia celebrated its thirtieth birthday last night at a gala gathering in Clendenen Hall, American University. Founders of the organization, past presidents and present members reminisced about achievements of the league here and throughout the country.

Definite accomplishments of the League were symbolized by 30 "birthday" boxes one for each year. Contents of a mysterious "1950?" box turned out to be the ballot box for the District, a goal long sought by the league. Mrs. Donald Beatty, president of the D. C. League, concluded a brief resume of league history in verse with a declaration that the league would persist in trying to achieve suffrage for the District.

Mrs. Beatty welcomed league members and guests and gave a special greeting to the past presidents of the organization who were present. These included: Miss Harlean James, first president of the D. C. League. Miss Elizabeth Eastman, Mrs. Albert H. Putney, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Richard Hogue, who came up from Remington, Va., for the party; Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, Mrs. Robert Leonard and Mrs. John F. Thomas.

Last night's birthday celebration also marked the first time that the new president of the League of Women Voters of the United States, Mrs. John G. Lee, met with the local league. Mrs. Lee spoke briefly and then introduced Dr. Louise Young, author of "Understanding Politics—A Practical Guide for Women." Dr. Young spoke on "Operation Immortal," a sprightly account of the league's first 30 years as gleaned from nearly a ton of league documents which Dr. Young prepared for the Library of Congress last spring.

Man Pities His Nagging Wife, but Wants to Leave Her for Another Woman Whom He Loves Devotedly; Wife Coyly Threatens Scandal If He Deserts Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For several years I have been torn between pity for my nagging wife and devotion to the woman I love. My wife knows that I do not love her. Our sex relations ceased some time ago, as she became repulsive to me in many ways. We have no children; she is merely a housekeeper for me. We have no common interests, no companionship. I spend as little time as possible at home; stay out of town whenever I have a good excuse.

My wife knows of my love for the other woman and had consented to divorce me, when suddenly she changed her mind and decided to "punish" me for being such a "bad, bad boy." She threatened damaging publicity if I tried to leave her for the other woman. That is typical of our relations. I am always "disciplined" if an incident displeases her. And if I don't jump at her beck and call I am being "mean" to her.

Gladys doesn't enjoy life with me. All she wants of me is security, but she is so self-righteous that she thinks everything she does is for my benefit. She has decided, for me, that I cannot be happy with the other woman, so she (Gladys) is going to "protect" me. I can't even feel like a man, much less act like one, with such a noose around my neck.

Naturally I intend to protect Nora, the woman I love, but despite all the threats I can't give her up. She has so many fine qualities that just being around her makes a better man of me and has given me more ambition, whereas my wife contributes nothing to my personality and I contribute nothing to hers.

In your opinion, which course of action will give me more peace of mind? — loyalty to my marriage vows, just to keep face? — or a home with the person I adore, built on faith, love and congeniality? Nora desperately needs me, and I feel that my responsibilities lie in the direction of making her life complete. Please advise me. J. B.

DEAR J. B.: Your letter articulates a tangle of emotional contradiction; but in essence your attitude is, "I love me." As I get the pitch of your quarrel with Gladys, it boils down to a childish, unreasoning feeling of boredom with an old toy, chiefly because you've sighted a new attraction and set your heart on having it.

As if explaining why you feel entitled to freedom of choice between wife and paramour, you declare, "We have no children, no common interests, no companionship. I spend as little time as possible at home; stay out of town whenever I have a good excuse. She is merely a housekeeper for me. She knows I do not love her — ", etc. As a start towards getting a saving slant on yourself, I advise you to go back over this sour comment. It says, in effect, that you rudely refuse to work at being married to Gladys, and yet blame her for the resultant breakdown in relationship.

As for having no children, that is a meaningless gripe, coming from you in the circumstances, unless accompanied by proof that you want paternity and she does not, and that she has wilfully blocked your willingness and ability to reproduce.

Talk of self-righteousness that deludes the hypocrite! Your narrative reveals that you are quite guilty on this score, at least as much as you think your wife to be. For example: 1. You imply that you pity Gladys, as if to say that's why you're on the fence, but soon make clear that you feel stymied by fear of scandal if you try to leave her. 2. You profess intent to "protect" Nora from Gladys' threat of injurious publicity, then weakly admit that you cannot renounce her.

In wrestling with your infantile, self-centered nature, your wife is paying a stiff price for economic security. But in sticking to her bargain, poor as it is, she is showing more real sense than you display. Her resolution to keep what she has and make the best of it squares with the basic truth that trading partners in search of perfection doesn't change one's own shortcomings — which ordinarily are the "rub" in marriage.

Because you are sexually attracted to another woman, you won't lift a hand to help Gladys save your marriage, by revising it to a cooperative, if no longer romantic, relationship. And with that fickle, quitter type of temperament, you probably couldn't find happiness with Nora either. Tedium, temptations, disappointments and frustrations are an inescapable part of adult experience, whether one is married or single; and if you can't keep a steady pace and be loyal to your partner in the midst of such trials, I think you'll always be a failure at conjugal teamwork, no matter how much "adoration" you feel to start. M. H.

Calls Chest Contribution 'The American Way'

"In America, people of all races and creeds are free to work together to meet human need. A contribution to the Community Chest is a vote for the American way of life—for the right of every individual to contribute voluntarily to institutions that function without government interference or supervision to meet human need and guide the growth of character."

It Was a Heartwarming Day for Anne As Readers Made Community Chest Pledges—But the Need Is Still Great

"I'M GOING to break my piggy bank!"

That's one way to meet a Community Chest pledge, and that's what one junior contrjbutor told us yesterday he plans to do!

Maybe you won't rave to go that far, readers, to fulfill the Chest pledges many of you made to me yesterday by phoning Metropolitan 6262. But your generosity is bound to make somebody happier during the coming year and thank you for it!

All in all, it was a heart-warming morning we spent receiving telephone pledges as part of this week's intensive Red Feather drive. Young mothers called, talking above the roar of children in the background. A lot of people whom the house-to-house solicitors missed seized the opportunity to make pledges by phone.

"I'VE ALREADY made my pledge but I'd like to raise it," one gentle, elderly voice said. We asked for the usual statistics, including her phone number. She said she'd have to find out what it was, and we reminded her it was on the telephone itself.

"I know, my dear," she explained quietly, "but you see, I'm blind."

AND RIGHT HERE I want to take off my hat to the telephone operators who were working along with me yesterday. Most of them came down at 6 a. m.—on their day off and through all that snow! Girls on this early shift were Henrietta Holdson, Emma Sanders, Florence Bradley, Oreta Howard, Agnes McIntire, Janet Craig, and Kathryn Rogers.

BUT THERE'S $866,026 still left to raise before the Chest quota is filled! So if you haven't already made your pledge, call that same number, Metropolitan 6262, today. Evelyn Hayes of The Post will be there, and there'll be volunteers from the Communications Workers of America taking calls, too, from 6 a. m. to midnight.

DEAR ANNE:

I would like to sell some homemade cakes to a local nonprofit organization for the actual cost of the ingredients. Can you tell me approximately how much I should charge for cake made by the enclosed or similar recipes?

M. W., Washington.

My suggestion would be to make a list of the price of each ingredient as charged at your store. With this and a table of measurements (such as is included in practically every cookbook), you can figure exactly how much you are paying for the materials that go into the cake.

DEAR ANNE:

My 6-year-old son recently spilled India ink and household cement (the transparent, waterproof kind) on our new limed oak desk top. Is there any way of removing the stains without marring the surface? How does one refinish limed oak? Mrs. R. I., Washington.

I'm afraid you won't be able to get rid of these stains without removing the finish. Refinishing of limed oak can be achieved this way: First, the old finish is taken off with paint and varnish remover or by sanding. Pores of the wood can then be opened up by scrubbing with a steel brush. Next, cover with a coat of white paint or white wood filler, wiping off before it dries so that the white is left in the pores only. When dry, cover with coat of flat spar varnish.

How Folks Talk Reveals a Lot

This is the second of a series of six articles on the factors promoting successful family living. It is reprinted with permission from The Annals of The American Academy of Political and Social Science for November, 1950.

By James H. S. Bossard, Eleanor S. Boll and Winogene P. Sanger

LANGUAGE IS SO important a factor in human relationships that it is difficult to understand why its role in family life should have been neglected so generally.

Language is many things that are basic in family life. It is a form of behavior, and a particularly revealing one, for each individual member of the family; it is the medium of their interaction; and it is the vehicle through which ideas and attitudes are transmitted.

In addition, it is also a form of behavior for the family as a whole, and it is this organic aspect that is being emphasized here.

A STUDY OF family conversation in eighty-two families, made by the Carter Foundation, reveals a number of striking facts.

First, most families show a specific totality or pattern which is characteristic of that particular family. This pattern is a product of many aspects of the family's life—the occupations of its members, their religious affiliation, the geographic areas in which they have lived, their social status, their age and sex, and the like. As a pattern, it reveals the life, past and present, of the family. For this reason the pattern is persistent and distinctive for any given family.

It is striking to observe, in thus studying objectively a number of family patterns of conversation, how readily they can be typed. For instance, some families talk chiefly about themselves: their experiences, achievements, misfortunes, plans, and problems.

OTHER FAMILIES, by way of contrast, talk mostly about persons or events outside of the family. As these conversations are reduced to written form and analyzed, it is noteworthy how largely they are of one kind or another in the foregoing respect.

Similarly apparent is the contrast between family patterns of conversation that are analytical or evaluating.

The first-named are are those which consist chiefly of the analysis, description, and interpretation of persons, objects, or events. The interest is to tell about the subject under discussion. One has something to tell here, and the overtones may be those of humor, mystery, drama, or simple recording.

OVER AGAINST this type is that where the underlying motif is that of passing judgment. Motives are impugned, purposes are evaluated, persons and events are "placed in their proper light."

These are the family conversations devoted to "talking about someone." Comments are chiefly critical, depreciatory, belittling. The boss is flayed, a competing neighbor's child is depreciated, the teacher is criticized, a social rival is ridiculed, a relative is castigated, a public official is denounced, the children are nagged, or the food is declared unpalatable.

Somewhat akin to this latter type is the pattern where conversation comes to be a kind of exhibitionism, or showmanship. The emphasis is not so much on expressing a thought as on giving a performance. The aim may be at cleverness, and may achieve that purpose or degenerate into mere smart-aleckiness; or the conversation may partake of the nature of a sadistic performance, where the purpose of hurting expresses itself in cutting speech. Or, the objective may be primarily that of holding the floor, so to speak, with a juggling of verbal balls, sometimes of gold but more often of tinsel. In most cases, this type of speech seems designed basically to call attention to the speaker, and may be related to a deep-seated inferiority complex.

OTHER CONTRASTS in these family patterns of conversation are to be found in their tonal qualities. At one extreme are those conversations which abound with "snarl words," and much of the talk consists of spasmodically throwing verbal bits at one another as one throws sticks at a dog.

In contradistinction are those family conversations which suggest a Sunday afternoon symphony concert. Instead of loud noises, wrangling, and constant interruptions, there is a quiet and polite exchange of ideas, even allowing for disagreement in conviction. People are allowed to finish a sentence. Even the children are allowed their courtesies.

ONE IMPORTANT by-product of this study is the impression one gains of these patterns as unconscious, even if persistent, habits of family living. That is to say, the families studied had no awareness, seemingly, of the extent to which their patterns of conversation conformed with a given type. There was no awareness or thought either of their nature or of their role in the development of the child members or in the relations between the adult family members. One cannot but be impressed with the possible human salvage that could be achieved by some judicious attention to the cultivation of family language patterns.

One wonders, too, what the diversion of but a minor part of current instruction in family living to family patterns of conversation might accomplish in this respect.

How Long the Day

The shortest day of all the year . . . Is not that certain one . . . When there is more of moonlight and . . . So little of the sun . . . But it is every day, my dear, . . . When I may be with you . . . To share your thoughts and hold your hand . . . The way all lovers do . . . Each second sweet is all too brief . . . The day is swiftly gone . . . And I must meditate and wait . . . Until another dawn . . . The moon is like a silent thief . . . Who steals the world from me . . . And draw another golden date . . . Into eternity . . . So too the sun's enduring pace . . . Is not the longest day . . . But on the clock there is no face . . . When you are far away.

STENOGRAPHER NEWSPAPER Advertising Department
Why take a boring job in a dull office, when here's a chance to work in a fast-moving, hard-hitting advertising sales department, with something new going on all the time. If you like a placid life, this is not for you. But if you're a fast and accurate stenographer and proud of it, if you like a job that tests your capabilities and keeps you active mentally, phone NA. 4200, extension 437, and ask for an interview appointment. Experience not as important as speed and drive.

565 Acres with Brick House
This highly productive farm is in the fertile Shenandoah Valley, 75 miles from Washington. The handsome Georgian brick house is nearly fireproof and commands a beautiful mountain view. The bath house at the swimming pool is in the style of the main house. There are 3 sets of farm buildings, with housing for the farm help. The brick stable is worthy of the finest horses, and is designed so that it can be converted to a dairy barn if desired. One of the most attractive features about this farm is its frontage on the beautiful Shenandoah River. Though it is clear of debt, illness in the owner's family brings it on the market at the reasonable price of $100,000. Shown by appointment by

ACREAGE, SALE 75

MARYLAND

300 ACRES—100 acres already sold for development. This acreage is located 4 squares over the District line in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. This bridge is now operating with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles a day. There is no reason why the property will not be as valuable here as the 3 bridges on the Virginia end where the bridges end in Virginia. Property there is worth from one to two million dollars an acre and that is the future of these 300 acres. We have also a 6-acre cemetery to be made larger, and under the Maryland law you cannot get a permit for any more cemeteries; but if you have already got a cemetery you can go ahead and develop it. Cemeteries, when they are completed, are retailed at $100,000 an acre. Barnaby blvd. has just been widened and regraded by the State of Maryland, and a number of shopping centers are promising to open up. We would sell this Barnaby front at a special price property not less than 50c a sq. ft. for a large portion of it. This should be the greatest shopping center around Washington. When I built the town of Chevy Chase, D. C., where the theater is located in Chevy Chase, that ground I sold for 32c a sq. ft. is now worth 2 million dollars an acre in the shopping center, and when I sold it for 32c, people said I was charging too much for it. I bought that ground from Mr. Charles C. Glover, the deceased president of the Riggs National Bank, and he bought it for $50 an acre before Conn. ave. was ever opened up. That will help you understand what this property in Southeast will be worth. Sears and Roebuck, one of the largest department stores in the world, has bought a large tract over here and are going to open a big department store there. Other department stores are moving out in Maryland and Virginia. Kann's, Woodward & Lothrop and the Hecht Co. are speculating in open branches out this way. You can reach me at my home, OL. 4408, or PULTON S. GORDON, Owner. Brokers' attention.

MacArthur, Man of Action

That's the title of the recently published book on The Man of the Hour in Korea . . . The authors are Cornelius Ryan and Frank Kelley, newspapermen . . . Doubleday is the publisher . . . We found it full of fascinating things about the Nation's No. 1 Warrior . . . Especially the quote that opens and closes it: "There is nothing in God's world more sure than this: Come what may, the United States is not going to scuttle in the Pacific" . . . MacArthur said it 10 days before the Korean War started. FDR's Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, was the first to jump MacArthur when the breaks turned sour . . . "MacArthur," said Ickes, "has been caught flat-footed in Korea" . . . His answer to all harpoonists is the following counsel on his office wall—by a Roman historian: "Commanders should be counselled by persons of known talent. If anyone feels qualified to give advice—let him come with me to Macedonia."

General MacArthur first heard the sound of battle when he was 4 . . . Indians raided his father's military post in New Mexico . . . An arrow splintered in a door post—3 inches over his head . . . The MacArthurs have always been soldiers. When the Civil War broke Arthur MacArthur, Doug's father, tried to run away and join up . . . His parent hired detectives to prevent it . . . A year later he gave permission . . . Arthur MacArthur became Adjutant of the 24th Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry . . . When the Colonel of that outfit first saw him he begged the Governor: "Take him back to kindergarten!" . . . He ate those words soon after at the battle of Stone River where Arthur turned a retreat into an advance . . . He grabbed the colors—waved them like a song-and-dance man in the finale of a musical show—rushed toward the enemy breastworks and planted them firmly. His unit followed and won the fight.

For his bravery Arthur was commissioned in the regular Army . . . The day his papers arrived his unit was under heavy fire . . . he put them in his pocket unopened . . . A few moments later he was hit, smack through that pocket . . . The bullet was stopped by the words: "To Arthur MacArthur: Greetings!" . . . When Mary Pinkney Hardy (Doug's mother) married Arthur her family refused to attend the wedding . . . She was from the South . . . He from the North . . . Doug was born 5 years later . . . "The first sound I remember," he told his biographers, "was the sound of a bugle" . . . West Point turned him down because of a spinal defect . . . Wisconsin doctors remedied that, and he made The Point a year later.

His mother accompanied him, staying at a nearby hotel to supervise his studies . . . The mother of U. S. Grant III was dwelling there . . . Both boys worked so hard at the academy and at the hotel, they rarely found time for leisure . . . Somehow, Douglas got himself engaged to 8 girls at the same time . . . He graduated from West Point with the highest marks in 25 years . . . Ninety days later he was assigned to the Philippines, which his father was commanding . . . On his first scouting raid against machete-waving brigands his orderly was hit full in the face with a shotgun blast . . . Doug kneeled to help his fallen comrade and just missed the second blast, which blew off his hat . . . A sergeant retrieved the tattered thing and his prediction was: "The remainder of your life is definitely on velvet."

On the expedition that occupied Vera Cruz (just before World War I) young Doug dressed up as a Mexican peon and slipped across the lines one night—and destroyed three locomotives . . . On that daring commando raid he was aided by a man soon to become an enemy of our Nation . . . Von Papen!

MacArthur first saw the Russians and Japanese in 1905 . . . He was with his parent, who headed the officers assigned to observe that conflict . . . Douglas says he witnessed an entire Japanese brigade commit suicide . . . Jap HQ ordered the brigade to cease the attack as the Russians were retreating . . . They took this as a disgrace and threw themselves on their swords 1000 at a time.

When he tried to get overseas in the First World War he was instructed to report to the General Staff at Washington . . . To his disgust they made him a press censor . . . It took him many months to maneuver out of that soft snap . . . He eventually got Over There as chief of staff to the Rainbow Division, which, incidentally, he named . . . The date he went to war was Dec. 7th . . . The same date that meant another war for him a quarter of a century later.

In France during World War I he wore four-yard long mufflers, raccoon coats, high-necked sweaters, immaculate riding boots and used a long-jeweled cigaret holder . . . He didn't go in for the corncob pipe now familiar to newspaper readers . . . One of the soldiers in the Rainbow Division said of him: "He was a hell-to-breakfast baby, long and lean. He could chase Germans like any infantryman" . . . He advanced so hurriedly with his troops early in 1918 that he had to be stopped from capturing the heavily-gunned fortress of Metz . . . Historians claim that had it been captured—the whole German army in that sector would have had to surrender . . . He begged permission to keep advancing, but HQ refused . . . He points out the same thing happened in World War II to General Patton.

MacArthur, leading his troops in another attack, was warned to keep away from a certain chateau . . . "The Germans have mined it," was the warning . . . MacArthur ignored it and made that chateau his HQ . . . When he was asked to explain that action he replied: "They set fire to it before they left. They would hardly have done that if they had mined it—now would they?" . . . A few days later he said: "I think we better get out of here. I've a feeling they are going to shell it" . . . That night, after moving to a nearby wood, the chateau was blown off the map.

When he returned in 1919 he was appointed superintendent of West Point, where he refused to discard his floppy old trench cap . . . "I like it," he told the officers . . . Finally, Maj. Gen. C. F. Thompson persuaded him: "My God, MacArthur, that hat! Remember you are now the head man here!" . . . Parting with it reluctantly, they say, it was the only time he really wept.

He married his first wife in 1922 . . . When they were divorced in 1929 MacArthur was again in the Philippines . . . The newspapers there were embarrassed about interviewing him . . . "Print it as you would any news!" he said . . . As U. S. Chief of Staff (1930-35) he warned the Congress repeatedly of another war . . . He begged for money, for men, mechanization and a powerful air force . . . He was called "a polished popinjay" and a "bellicose swashbuckler" . . . To which he said: "I have humiliated myself. I have almost licked the boots of some men to make our army a better fighting force" . . . In the superficiality of Washington society—his critics put out the canard that his remarkable reports (as Chief) were written by Eisenhower . . . It was Churchill who suggested to FDR that MacArthur be ordered off Bataan. He takes credit for that in his book, "Their Finest Hour" . . . MacArthur's bravery is no Army press agentry . . . Men who have been close to him in the struggle will so certify . . . Once an aide cautioned: "General, I think we'd better take cover" . . . He replied: "You are saying that because you are scared."

Convict Died in Drugged Sleep, Doctor Says After Fire Probe

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 11 (AP). A Virginia penitentiary prisoner was under the influence of drugs when he was burned to death in his cell last Thursday, the prison physician reported today.

Dr. Robert Buckley said it was his belief that Vincent Hubbard, 33, of Richmond, "was under the influence of an excessive amount of hypnotic drug during his sleep the night he was burned."

Two hundred tablets containing phenolbarbitol were found in Hubbard's cell, in a jar camouflaged to look like a mustard container, Dr. Buckley said. The physician said none of the drug had been prescribed for Hubbard.

Maj. W. Frank Smyth, prison superintendent, said such drugs were acquired for the prison hospital only. Finding out how Hubbard got them, he said, would be "like looking for a needle in the haystack."

Dr. Angle to Speak At Suburban Hospital

Dr. Robert G. Angle will present a case report on a rheumatic heart patient tonight at a clinical staff meeting of Suburban Hospital, at Bethesda, Md. A second speaker, Col. J. E. Ash, who heads the hospital's laboratory services, will speak on "Collagenous Diseases."

Hospital authorities, in announcing the meeting, also released the institution's November report. It showed that the hospital admitted 457 patients and treated 348 emergency cases. Ninety-five babies were born at the hospital in November, according to Miss Amelia C. Manry, superintendent.

Support 3 Pledges

Citizens Back Montgomery Republicans

The Montgomery County Civic Federation last night gave its support to three major platform pledges of the county's Republican Party.

At its last meeting at the Bethesda Elementary School, the federation adopted resolutions urging the 1951 Maryland General Assembly to pass legislation which would:

1. Permit Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties to appoint one member each to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, with one to be appointed by the Governor. All three are now appointed by the Governor.

2. Return the power to appoint members of the county board of education to the County Council, and

3. Return the power to appoint county Liquor Control Board members to the council.

Allan B. Fay, chairman of the group's sanitation and public health committee, read a report urging that most of the sanitary commission's major functions remain under state control, rather than revert to the county as urged by the GOP.

New resolutions introduced last night and referred to committees included recommendations to (1) establish a civil defense committee of the federation; (2) permit payment of one-half of county, city and state tax bills within 30 days of billing, the other half within six months, and (3) support legislation for compulsory annual inspection of motor vehicles, preferably by a state agency.

The Federation agreed to hold its meetings henceforth in the new Woodward & Lothrop auditorium, Wisconsin and Western aves., Bethesda.

Restaurant Convention Starts Today

The Southeastern Regional Restaurant Convention will open at the Statler Hotel tonight and continue through Friday. More than 7500 delegates and visitors are expected.

Activities tonight will include the official opening of exhibits, a baking demonstration and a dance.

Sponsored by the Washington Restaurant Association, in cooperation with the National Restaurant Association, the exhibits will feature special dishes. Washington chefs will compete for 34 prizes, including a silver medal presented by the French government. The public will be invited to tour the exhibition Wednesday night.

Hyattsville Fine Put On Installment Plan

An installment-plan fine was imposed yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court on Paul Davis, 30, of 647 Anacostia ave., nw.

Davis was fined $250 and given a suspended jail sentence after being convicted of assault and battery on James L. Burton of 710 A st. se.

Judge Robert W. McCullough said that if Davis went to jail in default of the whole fine, his wife and four children would be the real sufferers.

So McCullough gave him five months to pay at $50 per.

Russian U. N. Staff Leaving Morgan Estate

GLEN COVE, N. Y., Dec. 11.—The members of the Soviet Union's United Nations staff who have occupied the former home of the late J. P. Morgan here since early summer will move out of the 57-room house at the end of the week, it was learned today.

Soviet officials are reported "negotiating" for rental or purchase of another residence in Westchester County.

Wilgus Cleared in Slaying Of His Common-Law Wife

A grand jury yesterday cleared George B. Wilgus, 28-year-old gas station attendant, of the charge of killing his common-law wife after a drinking bout last month.

Wilgus admitted to police that he struck Charlotte Bruce, 24, once in the neck with his fist, in their basement apartment at 913 Massachusetts ave. nw., on November 11.

The two had been drinking during the previous night, but the woman returned to the apartment alone at 3 a. m., Wilgus said. When he tried to put her to bed, Wilgus said Miss Bruce lunged at him and tried to scratch his face. It was then that he struck her, he said.

Wilgus was charged with second degree murder when arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. The grand jury ignored that charge yesterday.

The grand jury returned seven other indictments yesterday, including one charging boxer Danny Petro, with robbing a hotel clerk of $216 in the 600 block of Pennsylvania ave se., on Novemver 5.

The clerk, Hayden O. Eans, 915 Butternut st. nw., was subsequently charged with embezzling rent payments from tenants in the Chastleton Hotel, where he worked. Evans' case was continued in Municipal Court yesterday to December 22.

Carl E. Bridenstine, 28, 115 12th st. se., was indicted with Petro for the robbery of Evans.

Two indictments were returned against Frederick Leos, 30, 613 C st., charging him with posing as an agent of the Secret Service and FBI. He detained two men under such false pretenses, the indictments charged, and robbed one of them of $32.

Secret Arlington Board Session

The Arlington County Board last night agreed to hear, in secret, evidence allegedly supporting its police investigating committee's criticism of the county manager and several police officers.

The board voted, 4-1, to hold a series of conferences beginning December 20 with the special committee after the chairman, E. J. Steger, stipulated that only board members be present, that the board pledge secrecy, and that committee informants be protected.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg, who denounced the committee report submitted September 9, and Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker protested their exclusion from the meetings.

Board member Alfred E. Frisbie, dissenting from the board's decisions, said he felt the county manager, the Commonwealth's attorney and the police chief should attend the conferences.

Steger, Joseph Leib, and Vic Gauzza, jr., were appointed to make the investigation last May after a series of editorials in the Arlington Sun.

The board selected attorneys Malcolm D. Miller and Edmund Campbell to represent it in a suit filed last Thursday by County Treasurer John Locke Green, asking to have an ordinance adopted by the board declared illegal. The ordinance creates a department of real estate assessments.

The board was left without an attorney when Rucker joined the county treasurer in the suit.

Gil Bocetti's Father Dies in McKeesport

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 11 (AP). Washington and Lee's Gator Bowl preparation held a tragic note today as Quarterback Gil Bocetti notified coaches of the death of his father yesterday in McKeesport, Pa.

The magician of Coach George Barclay's split-T attack was at the bedside of his father, Gilbert, when he died after a long illness. Bocetti, the youngest of three sons, will not return to school until the end of the week.

Buck Hunter Makes Find

WHIPPANY, N. J., Dec. 11 (U.P.). Robert Peacock, 22, set out in his car to go hunting early this morning, the opening of New Jersey's six-day buck-hunting season. He hit and killed a 200-pound eight-point buck, wrecking the front of his car.

Brawner on Stand

Postal Check Forgery Case Nears Jury

The case of French S. Brawner, former Dumfries, Va., postmaster charged with forging and passing 29 Government checks, was expected to be given to an Alexandria District Court jury today.

Yesterday, Brawner took the stand as each of the 29 checks was produced and denied he had forged the payee's name to any of them.

Brawner testified that he had been postmaster at Dumfries from 1931 to December, 1949, when postal officials first charged him with the forgeries. "After that," Brawner said, "I just felt I couldn't carry on so I resigned."

Four character witnesses testified for Brawner, including Jack F. Vick, a member of the Prince William County Board of Supervisors. All said Brawner had an "excellent" reputation.

Last week, Government handwriting experts testified that signatures on 28 of the forged checks were "similar in character" to the handwriting of Brawner.

Air Arsonists Hunted

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 11 (AP).—Brush and grass blazes killed two women in southeast Texas today. Officers hunted aerial arsonists as flames scourged the area, destroying homes.

In central Texas, another blaze roared near the tiny town of Keene, most of whose 500 population are Seventh-day Adventists. It was brought under control late today.

Vexing Spectacle

You Can't Blame TV For Football's State

By John Crosby

FOOTBALL, apart from the Bowl games, has passed into what sportswriters insist on calling history. At least, for another year. That will leave plenty of time for reflection, if football is important enough to warrant so elevated a term.

Crosby

Much of this reflection, I'm afraid, will involve television; much of it will be unfavorable to TV. Some 4268 reflective sportswriters will blame low attendance on the presence of television, high attendance to TV's absence. Before they get into print, I'd like to cast one minority dissenting vote. If football is losing its audience, it isn't because television is bringing it into the homes; it's because the game itself is becoming an increasingly vexing spectacle.

I had two tickets to the Army-Columbia game which I tried to give away and couldn't, though I spent half the morning on the telephone trying hard. Granted that the game was a fore-ordained rout, the best team in the country (at least, rated that high at the time) would have drawn a far larger crowd a few years ago.

Blanchard and Davis, who got football out of their systems before the two platoon nonsense was invented, were not only fine offensive players but fine defensive backs. They were dramatic individuals, not pawns in what has become a staggeringly complicated chess game. The only dramatic individual anywhere around a football field is the coach, the rest are puppets. And I don't think puppets have enough vitality to fill football stadia.

A FEW OTHER COMPLAINTS. One of radio's most irritating mannerisms has been bequeathed to television. I refer to the sudden violent increase in volume when the commercial comes on. Man has his set tuned to a level not inimical to his eardrums. Then comes the singing commercial pitched at a volume not much lower than a subway whistle or a woman's scream. (You must have heard one of those noises.) Man has to leap across the room and turn it down. When Martin Kane comes back, he has to leap up again, turn it back up. Three commercials mean six separate leaps, which is too much leaping for so indolent a character as myself.

It also means a gross violation of FCC regulations which holds that radio and television stations should maintain a reasonable uniformity of volume. Let's, for heaven's sake, cut it out, fellows. You can sell me the Benrus just as seasily—in fact, easier—at 3 decibles as at 10. My sales resistance mounts with the volume.

ANOTHER THING that has always irritated the home audience, first in radio, now in television, is what I like to call audience-stealing. A few years back "Information, Please" and Henry Morgan, two programs which appealed substantially to the same audience, were on at the same hour on different networks. As a result they divided the available audience between them, doing grave harm to both shows as well as thwarting a great many listeners who would like to have caught both.

In television, N.B.C. has pitted the Robert Montgomery show against C.B.S.'s "Studio One." Both are fine dramatic shows, appealing to the same type of people. This is a particularly virulent form of competition in television because the coaxial cable can only carry one of these shows; many cities are not even given a choice. N.B.C. has also put the last half-hour of its imposing "Big Show" up against Jack Benny on C.B.S. and its Wednesday night frolic of comedians (Danny Thomas, Jimmy Durante, etc.) up against Arthur Godfrey.

The idea seems to be to kill off the opposition. The audience is deprived of a choice in the matter. Why two comedians on opposing networks?

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Yep, This Is Washington (And Its Environs)

H. E. E. forwards a touching tale about a motorist who was stopped by a District cop for a minor infraction of the traffic rules.

"I see you live in Hyattsville," said the officer, examining the man's license.

"No," came the reply. "I live in Bladensburg. You see, when I moved to this house, the address was Cedar st., Bladensburg, because that's where we got our mail. Later, they changed the name of the street to Tilden rd., and after a while we started getting our mail from the Hyattsville post-office. So our address was changed to Tilden rd., Hyattsville. But now I see the Bladensburg office is going to serve us again, so the address changes back to Bladensburg. As a matter of fact, I've lived in the same house for 14 years but have never been quite sure where it was located."

"That's just peachy," sympathized the cop. "Do you at least know your way home?"

"Well," said the motorist, "that depends. If the weather is nice I go out Baltimore blvd. to Peace Cross and turn right into Defense hwy. When it rains, I drive to Colmar Manor and if the highway is still open I go the usual way. But if the highway is blocked I go to Riverdale via Rhode Island ave., and cut across to Edmondston ave. Unless Riverdale is flooded, of course. In that case I go out Benning rd. through Kenilworth, over River rd. to Cheverly, and then back to Bladensburg."

The policeman was glad to get a word in edgewise, in an effort to terminate the ordeal. "Give me your phone number and go on about your business," he said. The motorist shook his head unhappily.

"I'm not so sure I can remember it," he murmured. "So far, we've had Hyattsville, Greenwood, Warfield and Union ex-changes at our address, and I can't always remember which one is current."

"You need a bracer, pal," said the policeman as he put away his ticket book, "and if I wasn't on duty I think I'd go with you.."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Will delver sweet 1-year-old cat, has had distemper shots." (Glebe 1618.)

"Fluffy, housebroken 9-week-old female kitten." (Georgia 4146.)

"Friendly, housebroken 6-month-old cats." (Falls Church 2538.)

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

During the last war, when my Marine husband was in the Pacific, I used to hang over the radio, fretting about the war news. It worried the children, and accomplished nothing worthwhile.

Now other men are going off to war and leaving behind wives who'll have trouble adjusting themselves to their new circumstances.

Why don't you sponsor an organization for these women, many of whom have recently moved to this area, and desperately need new friends and new interests to help them through the period of adjustment?

Mrs. Phillips D. Carleton,
2911 S. Columbus st.,
Arlington, Va.

Dear Mrs. Carleton:

This column sponsors nothing except the general proposition that a bit of humor helps us to be better neighbors.

However, inasmuch as you seem to have a good idea, and will probably hear from some area women whose husbands are on the fighting fronts, why don't you serve as a focal point for the formation of such a group?

If there's any real interest in it, the organization might perform such useful functions as providing a vehicle for social and intellectual gatherings, a program of volunteer work in local hospitals and institutions, and even a cooperative baby-sitting service to enable mothers to see an occasional movie.

In union there is strength—and goodness knows we could stand a little at this point.

Bill.

REMINDER

Cartoonist Herblock will be principal speaker at the meeting of the District Liners Club at 8 tonight, Petworth Library. Everybody is welcome.

"SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE"

So far, it's been a quiet morning at the Board of Education, with no new charges filed by Veep Adelbert W. Lee. But don't despair—the day is young yet.

'Paper' Curtain For Chinese Reds

By Drew Pearson

Bellhops at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, all World War II vets, are sore as a boil at the big liquor parties thrown by the Chinese Communists in the Waldorf Tower.

Pearson

One bellhop, on being summoned to the Communist suite, was asked to bring up the newspapers. He loaded himself with the New York Times, New York Mirror and the Herald Tribune and rapped at the door.

Taking one look at the newspapers, the bland Chinese reprimanded: "No, no, not these papers. The Daily Worker."

The bellhop, though seething inside, just as blandly replied: "Sorry, sir, we can't get it here. You'll have to make your own arrangements."

Trapped Marines

Worried Pentagon strategists will only talk about it privately, but one of the most serious military errors of any recent war was responsible for trapping the First Marine Division and the two Seventh Infantry regiments which made their painful, gallant fight out of Hagaru.

The tragic fact is that they never would have been trapped but for three unforgivable military errors.

The first error was lack of liaison between Lieut. Gen. Walton Walker, commander of the Eighth Army, and Maj. Gen. Edward Almond, commander of the Tenth Corps. For some strange reason, known only to MacArthur, these two generals had no battle communication with each other, but had to talk to each other by way of Tokyo some 700 miles away.

Second, both generals had their men racing for the Manchurian border to see which could get their first. Reassured by MacArthur's intelligence that they had nothing to fear from the Chinese, the troops fanned out, instead of driving forward in a strong, compact spearhead. Furthermore, the Tenth Corps under General Almond went racing off toward the north, instead of sticking close to the Eighth Army.

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, acting on instructions from his government, warned United States officials against this advance before it started. Specifically, he warned that there were 700 miles of Chinese border toward which MacArthur was headed, along which the Chinese were concentrated.

The British also warned against advancing into this area, and there warnings were relayed to MacArthur by Washington.

Furthermore, the Joint Chiefs of Staff cabled a reminder to MacArthur that General Almond had no battle communications with General Walker. MacArthur sent back a curt reply that he knew what he was doing.

Result was that the Chinese wisely hit at the vacuum between the Eighth Army and the Tenth Corps.

During this confusion, General Almond tried to send his Marines to close the gap between him and the Eighth Army. But after a brief, bloody battle, they were forced to turn back to the Chosin Reservoir.

Then for some reason, so far not explained, the Marines were allowed to remain at the reservoir for four days, giving the Chinese an opportunity to swarm all around them and cut off escape.

NOTE—During this period, MacArthur had time to send five messages to American newspapers explaining why he was not to blame in Korea.

Human Relations

You don't usually expect the chairman of a Democratic National Committee dinner to be a philosopher on human relations. Nor do you expect many big businessmen to be working Democrats. But Dwight Palmer, president of the General Cable Co., happens to be chairman of the big Democratic dinner in New York this week, and when he received a letter from an Indiana Democrat calling him a Negro-loving, prolabor Roosevelt-ian, Palmer wrote back:

"My job is running a company that employes about 7000 people and we have plants in Perth Amboy and Bayonne, N. J.; Rome, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; Los Angeles and Emeryville, Calif. For a long period of time I have been interested in bettering human relations by opening up jobs and upgrading people, based solely upon merit, regardless of race, creed or color.

"The America of the early days, when the Anglo-Saxon strain dominated everything, is no longer with us. The influx of foreign-born from all parts of the world has made America what it is today. Each racial and religious group brought with it some of the best of its old world talents and ideals. And these all dumped into the melting pot have developed a Nation that is strong, democratic and outspoken with all the freedoms that go to make up a true democracy.

"We have two Jews as vice presidents in our organization. Another vice president is of Italian parentage. We have Protestants and Catholics in the management group and we have Negroes serving as foremen, department managers and in our laboratories.

"It so happens that I was born in St. Louis, white and Presbyterian. It took me quite awhile to free myself of some of my prejudices and discriminations. But my feeling is that I have to see what I personally can produce in the way of doing my share to get people to understand each other better."
